WALLACE

A refined sensitive affectionate woman

Shy and reserved in disposition, and apt to hide her light under a bushel; with plenty of intuition and perceptive power, a sense of colour, harmony, and beauty, a talent for creative work, and a fund of patience, endurance and persistence, but somewhat in a groove, and too much of a stay-at-home. Imaginative and longs for a bigger world and a brighter and more generous life, but wanting in independent thought and action, and afraid to take the first steps.

MOTOR NOTES AND NEWS.

The Tax on Petrol : Effect on Motor Trade and Commerce : What Motor Owners Complain Of : The Dangers of Reducing Petrol Consumption.

IF a sufficient number of people, either from necessity or choice, practice, for any considerable period, just a slight economy in respect of any one particular product of an industry, that industry becomes depressed, the traders who handle the product suffer, while all those trades allied to the industry are also injured.

There are some forty thousand licensed motor vehicles in the Free State, and with comparatively few exceptions the owners of these cars will be compelled by the recently imposed tax of fourpence a gallon on petrol to economise in the use of that commodity. Assuming that each of these owners decides to reduce his expenditure on petrol by one gallon a week, the distribution will be cut down by nearly two million gallons a year.

THE DANGER OF ECONOMY.

Economy to the extent of a gallon a week would mean only the saving of the new tax on four gallons of spirit, so that it is fairly certain the many who will have to economise will cut their petrol supply to possibly four or more gallons a week. The reduction by four to five million gallons in the handling, distribution and sale of petrol in a community the size of the Free State would be quite serious enough if the loss that it entailed stopped at that; but, unfortunately, such a reduction would have very serious repercussions on the motor industry, on employment, and on the transport of the country.

To-day the motor car, the omnibus, the lorry are the hand-maids of manufacturers, traders, commercial travellers, farmers, transport companies, milk vendors, travelling cutlers, and even dealers in second-hand clothes, while thousands use private cars every day for business purposes. All these will be affected by the tax, and complaint is general that the Free State Minister for Finance has dealt unjustly with this important section of the community.

WHAT MOTORISTS COMPLAIN OF.

This is the second time within the year that Mr. Blythe has gone to motor owners for money to help square his accounts, and while they agree that he should obtain the money necessary to balance the country's Budget, their complaint is that they have been subjected to a double tax. They put the case this way. As ordinary citizens their income tax has been increased by sixpence, but because they are the possessors of a car a second tax of fourpence on every gallon of petrol they use is also placed on them, while in addition they pay a heavy road tax. There has been no discrimination as to whether the car is used for business or pleasure. They feel aggrieved that they have been singled out to bear an unjust measure of taxation, and contend that a more equable distribution of the fourpenny tax would avoid a disruption of trade and much unemployment, which, they believe, is bound to follow the imposition.

A MOTOR TRADER'S FEARS.

Discussing the matter with the managing director of one of the leading motor establishments in Dublin, he expressed the opinion that the tax would have a very injurious effect, not only on the motor trade, but on the transport and commerce of the country. He pointed out that a year or so ago 70,000 were employed in the motor industry in the Free State. World depression had caused a very critical situation, and a great many in the industry had to be dispensed with. Already they were feeling the results of the recent imposition. Private cars, especially the high-powered vehicles, were being laid up, and he was afraid that the import of cars, on which the Government got a big revenue, would decrease. To avoid dismissing employés, his firm was one of several who put their staffs on half time.

Commercial houses who sent their representatives round the country in cars and all those who used cars in the course of their business, he said, would feel this tax, while the transport of the country would be, perhaps, the biggest sufferer, which was a very serious matter.

He added that he was afraid if the losses that would be created by the tax—i.e., unemployment, reduced revenue from imported cars and tyres, and lowered consumption of petrol—were placed against the amount that the tax was expected to realise, the figures would be disappointing.

CATTLE.

DUBLIN (METROPOLITAN).

Beasts	4,991	increase	524	5,902	5,244
Veal Calves	5	increase	1	6	3

Cattle trade on the whole was tolerably well maintained, but the larger number of cattle to handle made it difficult to better the money position in the main, although there was an occasional 6d. to 1s. per cwt. more here and there for a beast of outstanding quality, but coming to handle the secondary and coarser grades of animals the price question proved more uncertain to mutually fix, leaning mostly in buyers' favour; but at current terms sales were possible for everything of useful character. There was a good attendance of both home and export buyers, and in the opening stages of business last week's top prices were more uniformly maintained for well turned-out bullocks and heifers, which again formed a very small percentage of supply. Most beasts are now showing the effects of bad weather. Big strong half-fat shorthorn bullocks weighing anywhere from 10½ to 13 cwt. were hard to cash, except at very low prices. Lancashire buyers are now mostly running on beasts of eight to 10 cwt., and at present low prices a fair trade passed in this direction. Still, the depression and uncertainty of trade yonder, and the number of English, Scotch and Canadian beasts coming on markets necessitates extreme caution on the part of buyers. There were very few buyers for heavier descriptions of cattle, especially in the shipping direction; in fact, outside of Lancashire patrons export enquiry was slow. The market ran into a late hour of the day, but there was a possibility of selling where owners were willing to make concessions. Beef cows were very numerous, and, although there was a good attendance of buyers, trade was again disappointing. There was a fair inquiry for the nice young cow of the heifer type, which just maintained late rates, but other classes were, if anything, worse, and, although offering exceptionally good value for money, few buyers seem in want of same, and a large number remained unsold. Prime medium-weight shorthorns, 35s. to 37s., occasionally 37s. 6d. and 38s. per cwt.; fancy blacks, 40s.; good commercial classes, 31s. to 33s., extra 34s.; rougher sorts, 29s. to 30s.; beef cows, best, 22s. to 23s., extra 24s. to 26s. per cwt.; secondary and rougher, anywhere from 17s. to 21s.

SHEEP AND LAMBS—Supplies to this market showed an increase of 539 head on last Thursday's supply, and, with a full attendance of buyers in home and shipping interests, market opened rather encouragingly. Shippers were more interested in small fat lambs, and salesmen were able to clear all on offer at an early hour. Prices, however, showed little change one way or the other. Demand was livelier for home trade mutton, but very little doing in export, and hoggets, in the circumstances, were bid for very cheap. Ewes were more wanted, and those of the better classes quickly changed hands at slightly more money. Rough and half-meated sheep were as slow as ever to move, and, though owners continue to make a strong stand in their endeavour to maintain values, the inevitable is asserting itself, and prices keep consistently slipping back, and many pens were again unsold at a late hour, when the following sales had taken place:—Prime mutton, 7d. to 7½d. per lb.; other classes, 5½d. to 6½d.; wethers, 40s. to 56s. per head; hoggets, 30s. to 48s.; extra, 50s. to 56s.; ewes, 25s. to 40s., extra 42s. to 46s., and lambs, 20s. to 34s., extra 36s. to 40s.

DAIRY CATTLE—Offerings on this market embraced 313 head of dairy beasts, a small increase on previous week's supply. The attendance of home and shipping buyers was good, but a slacker disposition overhung trade. Shippers bid disappointingly for all classes of cows, including heifers in milk or springing condition. Altogether, the market worked out cheaper, particularly heifers, which were fully 10s. per head lower on the week. Choice middle-aged cattle were none too plentiful, and for this reason prices were barely steady. Secondary and poorer classes were a dragging sale, but there was a possibility of clearing at the poor prices ruling. Choice cows, £22 to £26, extras up to £27 per head; heifers, £20 to £23 10s.; secondary sorts, £15 to £19, and poorer classes, £9 to £13 10s.

PIGS.—The gathering of swine on this market totalled 1,321 head, an increase of 16 on last week's supply. There was a big and business-like attendance of home and export buyers, and trade throughout was dominated by an active and dearer disposition, particularly pigs around six stone weight; in fact, all classes and weights were more wanted, and, with a better run of quality pigs, salesmen found no difficulty in disposing of supplies at an early hour, with values recovering fully 2s. per cwt. from last week's drop. Slips and bonhams, however, show little sign of improving, and, even at present low prices, a clearance seemed doubtful. Prime light-weight pigs, 58s. to 60s. per cwt.; heavier, 46s. to 48s.; sows, 38s. to 40s.; slips and bonhams, 12s. to 20s., extra 24s. to 27s. 6d. per head.

YORK.—Good show of Irish and English store cattle of average quality. Trade slow at late rates, though dealers complain they have bought dearer. Lighter offer of dairy cattle, with good attendance of buyers, trade steady; young fit cows met a ready sale. Small show of sheep and lambs; slow trade at last week's rates.

BILLINGSGATE FISH.—Soles 15d. to 21d., slips 12d. to 20d., lobsters 10d. to 18d. per lb.; live eels 14/- to 24/-, dead 10/- to 17/- draught; turbot 8/- to 12/-, brill 9/- to 10/-, plaice 5/- to 12/-, halibut 14/- to 16/-, lemon soles 10/- to 14/-, hake 8/- to 12/-, mackerel 3/- to 5/-, skate wings 3/- to 4/-, haddocks 2/- to 5/- per stone.

BRISTOL.—About 480 Irish cattle, 31 Irish sheep, and 90 English cattle on offer, for which trade was slow. Milch cows, £22 to £24; 2½-year-olds, £17 to £19; yearlings, £12 10/- to £14 10/-; lamb, 11d. per lb.; beef, 75/- to 80/- per cwt.; mutton, 10d. per lb.

BIRMINGHAM PIG.—A moderate supply, with trade fair to active, and values for bacons and smalls firmer; bacons, 9/3 to 9/6; cutters, 10/- to 10/6 and 11/-; and sows, 7/- per score, dead weight.

LIVERPOOL.—The decline in America and the Argentine had already been discounted here, but forward deliveries of WHEAT, after being dearer at the outset, receded to a fair extent owing to free selling, though later advanced sharply on easier sterling exchange and encouraging afternoon cables, heavier Russian shipments preventing market finishing at best, though final rates marked a decided improvement on last night. C.i.f. parcels No. 2 Manitoba November sold at 29/6. No. 3 early November 28/6, and Rosario-Santa Fe (63lb.) January 26/7½ to 27/- per quarter. BRISTOL. — After a period of dullness the demand for BACON has latterly shown some improvement, and fores and streaks were in better request, and values steadier. Gammons were in poor demand, and American bellies sold slowly. HAMS—Short cut remained nominal. LARD was a slow market, with values again in buyers' favour. CHEESE—Canadian was in moderate request, but values of New Zealand were difficult to maintain in face of the quieter trade. BUTTER was a disappointing market, the demand being slow, and prices all round were easier.

AUSTRALIAN WOOL SALES.

At the wool sale held at Sydney yesterday the offerings amounted to 12,035 bales, of which 11,185 were sold. Wool sold privately consisted of 376 bales. There was a good selection. The market was firm for all descriptions, except the very best lines, the prices obtained for which were slightly irregular. Japan and Yorkshire were the principal operators, with limited support from the Continent. Greasy merino realised up to 19½d., comeback up to 13¾d.

The offerings totalled 9,000 bales at yesterday's wool sale at Melbourne. There was a good selection. Competition was keen and general, and 96 per cent. of the offerings were sold. The market showed no quotable change, merino fetching up to 17d. and comeback up to 16¼d.

WOOL PRICES UP IN FRANCE.

The auction of wool at the Magasins Generaux at Tourcoing yesterday was well attended. The whole of the raw and washed wool put up for sale was disposed of at prices averaging from 15 to 20 per cent. above those in September. In the afternoon 400,000 kilogrammes of combings were sold at a price 15 to 20 per cent. higher for fine qualities. Medium and common qualities were up 10 to 15 per cent. It is stated that important purchases were made for export to Great Britain.

CENTRAL CRIMINAL COURT.

(BEFORE MR. JUSTICE SULLIVAN.)

Margaret Hogan (25) pleaded not guilty when charged with the murder of her newly-born male child.

The accused was employed as a cook at Brierley House, Duleek, Co. Meath, and on September 26th the body of a child was found in a suitcase in her room. A piece of tape was wound tightly round the child's neck. At the inquest a verdict that death was due to strangulation was returned.

Mr. E. J. Kelly, K.C., and Mr. P. J. Roe (instructed by the Chief State Solicitor) prosecuted.

Mr. Fawsitt (instructed by Messrs. Keating and Keating) defended.

Margaret Hogan, giving evidence, said she did not remember her actions after the child was born. She was in terrible pain. The child gave one cry, and witness then put the tape round its neck. She could not say whether the child was alive or dead when she put the tape round its neck.

Mr. Justice Sullivan said there was evidence that the child was born alive, but there was, perhaps, more doubt as to whether the child was alive when the tape was tied round its neck. On the other hand, there was a strong probability that the child was alive when the tape was placed round its neck, and the only question that remained was whether it was the tying of the cord round its neck that deprived it of life, and whether it was the accused who had tied the tape. If the jury thought that the accused committed the act while she was incapable of appreciating what she was doing they would be justified in bringing in a verdict of manslaughter.

The jury returned a verdict of not guilty, and the prisoner was discharged, the judge allowing her travelling expenses back to Drogheda, where she was arrested.

FALSE PRETENCES ALLEGED.

CORK CIRCUIT COURT CRIER'S DENIAL.

Alfred O'Regan, 63 Dublin street, Cork, was charged with obtaining a sum of £5 from Thomas and Ellen Erangey, Tuckey street, Cork, by false pretences.

Mr. E. J. Kelly, K.C., and Mr. Roe (instructed by the Chief State Solicitor) prosecuted, and Mr. J. F. Meagher (instructed by Mr. J. F. Foley) defended.

Mr. Kelly said that the accused was crier of Cork Circuit Court, and in June last introduced Erangey to Mr. Travers Wolfe, T.D., a Skibbereen solicitor, whom Erangey instructed regarding the purchase of a house, and also to defend proceedings that were taken to eject him from his house in Tuckey street. Accused told Erangey he wanted £5 to get the ejectment case adjourned, saying he would lodge it in Court and that it would be refunded later when the case was disposed of. The money was not lodged in Court and had never been returned to Erangey.

Mr. Neligan, Chief Clerk, Cork Circuit Court, said that there was no record of O'Regan having paid in the £5 in the way it was alleged that he said that he had done.

The accused, in evidence, denied ever having received any money from Erangey, and said that on the day the Erangeys said they had given it to him he had been travelling, and had not gone near their house.

Mr. Jasper Travers Wolfe, T.D., stated that he heard from an official that £5 had been paid to O'Regan to give to witness on account of costs.

The case was adjourned until to-day at 11 a.m.

DUNDALK EXECUTORS' APPEAL.

(BEFORE THE CHIEF JUSTICE, MR. JUSTICE FITZGIBBON AND MR. JUSTICE MURNAGHAN.)

Arthur Samuel Coulter and Robert James Coulter, executors of the will of Elizabeth Coulter, deceased, late of Seatown place, Dundalk, and the trustees of the settlement executed by her on her marriage to Joseph Arthur Coulter, appealed from the judgment of the High Court upholding the decision of the Revenue Commissioners that the estate of Elizabeth Coulter, widow, was liable for payment of estate duty in respect of four policies of insurance for £1,000 each, two with profit and two without, effected by Elizabeth Coulter on her own life, and settled by her in 1877 on her marriage with Joseph Arthur Coulter, who predeceased her in 1901. The policies were assigned to the trustees by Elizabeth Coulter in trust for herself until her marriage, and after the marriage in trust for Joseph Arthur Coulter if he should survive her, and, if he should die in her lifetime, in trust for such person or persons for such purpose and in such manner as Joseph A. Coulter should by deed or will appoint. Joseph A. Coulter predeceased his wife, and apportioned the policies of insurance among the five children of the marriage.

FINANCE ACT OF 1894.

The Revenue Commissioners decided that the policies were liable to duty under Section 2, Sub-section D, of the Finance Act, 1894. The High Court upheld this decision.

The grounds of the appeal were that the policies of insurance did not pass, or could not be deemed to pass, on the death of Elizabeth Coulter within Section 2, Sub-section D, of the Finance Act, 1894, and that, if they did pass, the property was settled property, and was exempt from duty by virtue of Section 5, Sub-section 2, of the Finance Act, 1894, read in conjunction with Section 55 of the Finance Act, 1910, and Section 14 (a) of the Finance Act, 1914; and, further, that, if the policies were liable to duty, they should not be aggregated with the free estate of Elizabeth Coulter, deceased.

Mr. Dickie, K.C., Mr. C. S. Campbell and Mr. W. I. Hamill (instructed by Messrs. Dickie, Coulter and Hamill) appeared for the appellants, the executors of Elizabeth Coulter, deceased; and Mr. T. S. McCann, K.C., Mr. E. J. Kelly, K.C., and Mr. G. O'Sullivan (instructed by Mr. B. Collins, Revenue Solicitor) for the Revenue Commissioners, the respondents.

STORE CATTLE SALES.

MESSRS. GANLY, SONS AND CO.

There was an improved tone in the demand for store cattle at yesterday's sale, and, with more customers than we have had for some time, higher rates were realised and fewer lots unsold. Aberdeen-Angus and Hereford crosses made from £14 to £10 15/-, or from 36/- to 39/- per cwt.; horned bullocks and heifers from £14 15/- to £11 5/-, or from 32/- to 35/- per cwt.; polly bullocks up to 36/- per cwt.

MESSRS. GAVIN LOW, LTD.

There was a much larger show of cattle at yesterday's sale, which included many useful lots of aged cattle in forward condition. Home and cross-Channel buyers were numerous, and a firm trade prevailed for all classes at recent rates, a shade more money being realised for some pens of well-bred Aberdeen-Angus crosses, and a complete clearance was made. Aberdeen-Angus and Hereford crosses made from 35/- to 40/- per cwt.; horned and polled bullocks and heifers from 28/- to 36/- per cwt. Captain H. de Burgh's pedigree Aberdeen-Angus herd met keen competition, the following being the prices realised, with the names of the purchasers:—Elyne of Oldtown, calved November 18, 1925, to Mr. J. E. Dunne at 17 gns.; her bull calf, Idolic of Oldtown, calved September 9, 1931, to Mr. J. E. Dunne at 9 gns.; Jesterlu of Oldtown, calved April 17, 1926, to Mr. J. CORK LABOURER'S INVESTMENT.

STORY OF STRANGE TRANSACTIONS.

BEFORE MR. JUSTICE HANNA.

William Roberts, a farm labourer, living near Skibbereen, Co. Cork, claimed £700 damages against Christopher D. Boudren, stockbroker, Cork, for injury and loss caused by the alleged negligence of the defendant as stock and share broker and agent of the plaintiff. Alternatively, the plaintiff claimed the return of £526 2s. 1d., alleged to have been entrusted to the defendant as his agent, and the sum of £365 17s. 7d., being moneys alleged to have been entrusted to the defendant as his agent. The plaintiff further claimed a declaration that the defendant was a trustee for him in respect of 120 shares purchased by the defendant for him out of moneys provided by him, in the Munster and Leinster Bank, Ltd.; and an account of all moneys received by the defendant for and on his behalf between October 17, 1928, and November 27, 1930.

Mr. FitzGerald, K.C., and Mr. J. J. Kavanagh (instructed by Mr. C. T. F. Russell) appeared for the plaintiff. The defendant was not professionally represented.

"VERY UNPLEASANT CASE."

This was a very unpleasant case, said Mr. FitzGerald. The plaintiff had a sum of £924 10s. 0d., which had been recovered on his behalf by Mr. Wolfe, solicitor, in respect of damages sustained in a 'bus accident in which the plaintiff was badly injured. On October 17, 1928, the plaintiff went to Cork, and, at the Courthouse, got the sum of £924 10s. 0d. from Mr. Wolfe in the form of a bank draft. Mr. Wolfe had a man with him, Alfred O'Regan, who had been a general law clerk, and was at that time the crier to the Circuit Court Judge at Cork. O'Regan was sent by Mr. Wolfe to accompany the plaintiff to Mr. Boudren's office for the purpose of investing this money on plaintiff's behalf.

Mr. Boudren prudently suggested the investment of the money in Munster and Leinster Bank shares, and, as the dividends would not be forthcoming for some time, gave the plaintiff £5 in cash and a deposit receipt for £45. After this Mr. Boudren apparently treated O'Regan as plaintiff's intermediary, to whom were sent the transfer deed and contract notes for the purpose of having them executed by the plaintiff, who was almost illiterate.

Counsel then detailed what he described as "the extraordinary transactions" which took place subsequently. Money, he said, was paid to O'Regan by the defendant, who apparently believed that O'Regan would give it to the plaintiff.

Mr. Justice Hanna—Did O'Regan not pay the money over?

Mr. FitzGerald—He is in the dock in Green street to-day in respect of another transaction.

Proceeding, counsel said that this man, O'Regan, apparently represented himself to be a clerk in the employment of Mr. Jaspar Travers Wolfe, an eminent solicitor in Cork, and Mr. Boudren treated O'Regan as Mr. Wolfe's representative, who was looking after the interests of the plaintiff.

Replying to Mr. Justice Hanna, Mr. FitzGerald said that he thought that the defendant did not indulge in speculation.

SALE OF SHARES.

In 1929, said counsel, O'Regan, without any written authority from the plaintiff, got Mr. Boudren to sell portion of the Munster Bank shares and invest the proceeds in the highly speculative shares of the Tanganyika concern. In the sale of the Munster Bank shares there was an actual loss of £70. It was not suggested that Mr. Boudren ever took anything for himself. In 1929 Mr. Boudren paid Mr. O'Regan £214 17s. 6d., and in 1930 £195 8s. 8d. It was hard to know how O'Regan carried on this thing, both with the plaintiff and the defendant. O'Regan got the plaintiff to sign a series of documents, and he actually paid to the plaintiff in the two years £47 15s. 5d. Apart from any speculation, the plaintiff lost £579 6s. 10d.

Evidence in support of counsel's statement was given by the plaintiff. He was told, he said, by the defendant that his money was all right. He never gave the defendant permission to change the Munster Bank shares to Tanganyika shares.

The defendant stated that he wanted O'Regan to be in the court, but he understood that O'Regan was at Green street. He also wanted the attendance of Mr. Jaspar Wolfe. He had made overtures for a settlement, but his offers were rejected.

At this stage Mr. Gerald F. Robinson, solicitor, announced that he had instructions from the defendant's mother, and he was given an opportunity to consult with the defendant.

The plaintiff, on the advice of his legal representatives, agreed to abide by the decision of Mr. Justice Hanna in the matter.

Mr. Justice Hanna said that Mr. Boudren had been made a victim, but he was responsible. He suggested the payment by the defendant to the plaintiff of £400 secured and costs. He added that he thought that the defendant had been very badly treated.

After the luncheon adjournment, Mr. FitzGerald said that the defendant would not give security for £400.

Mr. Robinson, for the defendant, asked for an adjournment to enable the defendant to defend the case in the ordinary way.

Mr. Justice Hanna adjourned the case until Friday, 27th inst., to enable the defendant to defend the case, and made as a condition precedent the payment of 12 guineas costs and 11 guineas witnesses' expenses.

THE WEALTHY AND THE POOR BROTHER.

(BEFORE MR. JUSTICE HANNA.)

Anna Maria McQuaide, New street, Dublin, was the plaintiff in an action to recover £1,550, being money alleged to have been lent by her husband, Michael McQuaide, deceased, to his brother, Henry McQuaide, the defendant, residing at Loughil, County Longford.

Mr. Geoghegan, K.C., Mr. Finlay, K.C., and Mr. Hogan (instructed by Mr. T. W. Delaney) appeared for the plaintiff; and Mr. FitzGerald, K.C., and Mr. McGuckin (instructed by Messrs. C. J. F. Farrell and Co.) for the defendant.

Evidence having been given,

Mr. Justice Hanna said that the proceedings were instituted for the purpose of obtaining from the defendant, on the face of an agreement which appeared to have been made, a sum of money advanced by way of loan by Michael to his brother Henry. It seemed to him, from the evidence and from a very natural thing in Ireland, that the wealthy brother Michael in Dublin wanted to help his poorer brother Henry, who lived in a thatched house on a poor farm at home, and he helped his brother to buy a new farm at £1,500. The deceased received from Henry the proceeds of the sale of the old home farm. He was quite satisfied that Michael never thought that Henry ever would be able to repay him £1,500. He added that the widow was quite right in bringing the action.

Judgment was given for the defendant, with an order that the plaintiff's costs should be paid by the defendant.

MEATH PARTNERSHIP ACTION.

(BEFORE MR. JUSTICE JOHNSTON.)

The hearing of an action brought by Thomas Connolly, of Gurnett's Great, Summerhill, County Meath, against Mrs. Mary Connolly, of Flat House, Dunboyne, and James Connolly, of Garadice, County Meath, was begun. The plaintiff, as administrator of the estate of Joseph Connolly, deceased, and also in his personal capacity, claimed a declaration that Michael Connolly, late of Flat House, Dunboyne, deceased; Joseph Connolly, late of Garadice, deceased, and he carried on business of farmers and cattle dealers in partnership under the name of Connolly Bros.; an account of the dealings of the partnership; payment to him of the amount found due to him, and other relief.

The defendants are executors of the will of the late Mr. Michael Connolly, and the defendant, Mrs. Mary Connolly, traversed the claims of the plaintiff that certain property formed part of the assets of the partnership. No appearance, it was stated, had been entered by the defendant, James Connolly.

The hearing of the evidence had not concluded when the Court rose, and it was announced that the case would appear in the list for next Wednesday.

The Better Cooking Act Carried Unanimously

There was loud applause in the House last night when the Better Cooking Bill was carried unanimously. The Bill, as was explained by the "Joint Ministers for the Interior," stands for better, tastier, more delicious meat dishes with plenty of thick, rich gravy. This, they pointed out, was only to be attained by the invariable use of Bisto.

BLACKROCK HOSPITAL TO BE CLOSED.

The Ministry of Pensions Hospital, Blackrock, is to be closed at the end of this month, and the fifty-nine patients who are undergoing treatment there will be transferred to the Ministry of Pensions Hospital at Leopardstown Park. The hospital was visited by the Chief Inspector of the Ministry of Pensions yesterday, and arrangements were made for the closing of the institution and the transfer of the patients.

At Leopardstown Hospital there will be ninety beds for surgical, medical and neurasthenic cases, and operating and X-ray departments are being fitted up.

The Blackrock Hospital formerly was the Meath Industrial School. During the Great War it was acquired as a military hospital, and subsequently it was taken over by the Ministry of Pensions for the treatment of wounded soldiers at a rent of £400 a year. Leopardstown Park has been given by Lady Power (free of all charges) for the benefit of wounded soldiers for such time as it may be needed.

WILL YOU TAKE THEM SERIOUSLY?

SUGGESTIONS OF BUSTLES AND CRINOLINES.

PARIS, Thursday.

WE now know the worst. The autumn openings have shown us all that we may expect from the fashions. We had been threatened with all kinds of changes in the modes, the kind that people like to look at, but hate to wear—bustles, and crinolines, and what-not.

We were prepared to change our silhouette, or flatly refuse to, according to our temperaments.

But when the collections were shown, they were only suggestions of bustles and crinolines, so that, after all, we shall be able to move in comfort, and even sit down without worry—unless, of course, we indulge our fancy for some of the picturesque gowns which always look so charming on the mannequins, and so wrong when they are worn by anyone else.

If women like to take to them seriously, they will become the fashion; but are skirts trimmed with draperies—which suggest bustles—or row upon row of frills—these are the "crinolines"—going to appeal to woman to-day?

It is a significant fact that most of the houses which show these models also show dresses side by side with them—dresses with skirts that are plain and untrimmed.

These simple clothes are the answer to the Maiden's Prayer right as right, and yet not out-and-out formal evening. They are the response to the demands of fashionable women also, who always like something simple, and something not too eccentric.

The Sash.

A very decided attempt is being made to revive the fashion of the sash, and it will be interesting to see whether women approve of this or not. The success or failure of this fashion will depend entirely on the first women who appear in Paris wearing sashes. If they look self-conscious, the fashion is sure to fail, while if they wear their ribbons and bows as if they were the smartest things in the world, every woman is certain to follow their example. Women do not exactly want to cultivate a seventeen-inch waist, but their normal-sized one is going to look much smaller than it really is this winter. This transformation will be achieved by the broad-shouldered effects, which, already seen a good deal, have been developed considerably. Little capes and capelets, épaulettes, a triangular piece of material falling over the shoulders at the top of the arm, and épaulettes which are simply broad tabs along the shoulder and sleeves cut full, and with the fulness used in the most intricate ways—these are some of the ways in which the couturières are widening the shoulders, in order to make the waist appear smaller.

Spangles and Wax.

There are two or three materials which are always beloved by the Parisienne. These are ciré (or waxed) materials, starched nets, and spangled mousseline. Ciré satin is a difficult and very unbecoming material to wear if the whole dress is made of it. It can be used most effectively, however, for either small coats or a skirt if the bodice of the dress is made of another material. Evening gowns of ciré chiffon can be very smart if they are trimmed with lace. The lace should, of course, have a dull surface to contrast better with the sheen of the chiffon.

Starched nets are particularly pretty for evening frocks for girls, and lightly spangled mousseline is ever so much more attractive, to my mind, than heavily sequined evening frocks.

Corsets for the Slim.

For even the slimmest figure, a girdle is clearly indicated, for the dresses of this season are not worn to their best advantage unless the hips show a rounded, unbroken line. The all-elastic step-in is now dividing honours with the girdle, which buttons down one side, and has an elastic section only in the centre back. For evening, heavy satin is a good choice. A little garment, starting waist high, and rather short in front, with a square, flat piece, about four inches in length, in the back, and with narrow gores of elastic webbing at each side, is one of the most satisfactory models.

Since women have returned from their holidays fresh emphasis has been given to the short-hair fashion. The coiffeurs say that women are coming not to ask for advice about the newest styles, but simply to have their redundant locks sheared. Those curls and rolls of hair which were the envy of women at the various seaside plages this season, have, apparently, been nothing but a nuisance, and sighs of relief have followed their disappearance. Their owners have discovered, once again, not only that long hair means that a definite time must be daily devoted to its care, but that it easily becomes untidy. It is expensive, too, for to keep the curls and rolls in order; many more visits must be paid to the coiffeur than in the days of the trim "shingle."

In other words, it is not a practised fashion for the busy woman, and most women come under that head to-day.

On the other hand, the style in hats this season is certainly intended for the longer hair fashion. So it seems that the coiffeur and the milliner must fight it out between them.

This dark green coat is a wrap-over one, and fastens with a leather belt. It is collared, and the bell-sleeves are trimmed in nutria, and there is a clever inset section on the right side of the coat.

A Talk on Many Things.

DEAR MARY,—Ever since my school days I have wondered what was the appearance of that piece of furniture described by Goldsmith as

I happened to quote the line the other day, when I accompanied Erica in a search for the ideal "Chesterfield settee." She was a trifle irritated when I used it to point my argument that there is nothing new under the sun, and that women of old (for surely a woman inspired the creator of that chest of drawers) were just as practical as the modern woman, and that the principle of double utility was not a modern inspiration.

"Look at the uses they had for herbs," I added; "they were not only valued as decorations and for fragrance and for cooking, but had a hundred uses in the family medicine chest. How many uses would you find for lavender?"

Erica snorted—impolite, but effective; for I never gave her the list of lavender virtues on the tip of my tongue.

Uses for Salt.

Salt can be used for half a dozen purposes. If soot falls on the carpet cover it with salt and sweep both up together; to prevent soot forming in the chimney and to make a fire burn clearly sprinkle the coals with salt (this also makes it burn more slowly); salt used regularly on the tooth-brush hardens the gums and improves the teeth; soak new brooms in strongly salted water and they will last longer; and a little salt added to the water helps flowers to keep fresh longer. And as for salt in the medicine chest—a bag of hot salt held to the face will relieve toothache.

Vinegar ("but," said Erica, "I don't suppose you have it in your cruet" used very sparingly in water for cooking white vegetables or poached eggs keeps the white from turning brown. A weak solution of vinegar and water removes grease from a polished table, and keeps the window glass and mirrors shining. A few drops of vinegar in the laundry water will keep colours from running. Vinegar cleans a bath or a slimy sponge, and makes your both more invigorating.

Mustard—"I know about mustard," said I, to stem the torrent. "It's used as an emetic and in a bath to avoid colds."

"Yes, but have you ever used it to remove inkstains? Spread mixed mustard on the stain, and then boil the cloth."

The Pepper Pot.

At this point we were lunching, and in my eagerness to get a word in I dropped the pepper pot, and while Erica struggled with tears and sneezes I remarked: "A pepper pot in your pocket is very useful if you take a small dog for a walk; when he is attacked by larger animals sprinkle pepper. When you meet a burglar on the stairs, again pepper is useful. Sprinkle pepper on the carpet under furniture, and it will discourage moths, or apply pepper lightly to a cut to stop bleeding."

We walked out of the restaurant in a strained silence, which remained unbroken even when we stood before a window in Grafton street, both craving for a new waistcoat of knitted wool, a real waistcoat not designed to cover the hips, with a cross-over in front, an ideal garment for a chilly morning in the house or under the ever-useful mackintosh. I noticed Erica was shivering slightly in her mackintosh. I suppose she wore it because it was a most becoming blue, though that day the sun was shining. But it is a bad habit to wear a "mac." or a leatherette coat constantly, as it keeps in the natural moisture of the body, and is a fruitful source of rheumatism. However, I did not venture to communicate this piece of wisdom.

Removing Mud Stains.

I noticed, as we crossed the road, that the blue mackintosh was badly mud-stained at the back, and, gathering up my courage, volunteered to "home clean" it. The operation was successful, and our friendship is saved.

To clean a mackintosh or leatherette coat, spread it out on the kitchen table and brush thoroughly with a fairly soft clothes brush. Take a basin of warm (not hot) water and a small quantity of acid-free soapflakes. Dip a soft nail brush in the soapy water and scrub the coat vigorously in sections from neck to hem, taking care to leave no "dirt lines." Then, to remove all soap, rub the coat gently, but briskly, with a soft cloth wrung out of clear water. A greasy collar may be cleaned with a soft rag dipped in petrol.

Yours, AILEEN.

How Economy's Demands Could Be Met.

JUST now it seems that the words "fashion" and "economy" indicate opposite extremes. Economy, from a private standpoint, bids us remember the rise in income tax and deny ourselves those new clothes we need so badly; or, taking a larger view, urges us to resist our inborn love of a bargain, and refuse to buy the foreign shoes, stockings, leather goods, silks and other things which, in spite of heavy duties, still compete with our own industries. Fashion, on the other hand, tells us that last year's frocks are unworthy of the woman who would keep in step with the changing world, and, moreover, that true chic demands that subtle blend of perfect line and fearless originality which is only safe in the hands of a foreign designer.

The Passing Show.

Every season the great designers set out to produce the passing show in all new costumes. They insist that we should buy new outfits for every hour and every activity of the day. Somehow men have escaped from this tyranny and declared their right to wear the same clothes day in and day out for business or social occasions. Even the mysterious rules governing white ties and dinner jackets remain fixed from year to year, and he who has once grasped them need make no further effort. Women's clothes are both more decorative and more comfortable, but how many of us can afford the morning, lunch time, afternoon, semi-evening and evening, formal and informal outfits necessary for her who looks right in any place, at any time?

Inconsistence.

It is undoubtedly good for trade that there should be a large demand for women's clothes, but such an inconstant, unpredictable demand may do as much harm as good. It is obvious that advertisers regard women as easy prey. The great bulk of advertising literature with its headlines and puffs, its recommendations from society beauties and its free gifts of stocking or cosmetics, is aimed at us alone. The manufacturers of luxuries fight for our attention, making us transfer our patronage and our money from one industry to another, and when we spend that ten shillings on scent instead of theatre tickets, well the nation loses on the swings what it gains on the roundabouts. Of course, the demand for certain luxuries is fairly steady, the heavy losses to industry come when a caprice of fashion suddenly wipes out the demand for certain commodities. Everybody has heard of the hairpin factories which could not survive the vogue for shingled hair. Lately we have seen a rush to supply the unexpected market for ostrich feathers, but the last fashion paper I opened says that "these have been dropped by all except the cheaper shops and department stores," so it is to be feared that this year's ostrich chicks will grow their tails too late.

Vogues and Beauty.

Is it too much to hope for some rationalisation of women's fashions? I do not want to see the drabness of modern towns increased by rigid uniform for all the women, but beauty is not always served by close attention to the mode. If new vogues developed more gradually out of the old, so that both manufacturers and public were allowed a breathing space between seasons, we should spend as much as ever on dress, but there would be more hope of our spending wisely. British goods would be the gainers if quality was the first consideration with the public, but, as things are, we desire endless variety, and we have to buy it cheap. Just now a saner policy is forced on us, both by the exhortations of our leaders and more strongly by the tariff barriers erected round us. Let us hope for an educated public opinion, able to resist the influence of foreign dress dictators, and by the discriminating purchase of British goods, secure a means of outlet and improvement for our own industries.

My Lady's Washing Day.

How to Handle your Delicate Fabrics.

"WE will have to depend on taking in one another's washing." One hears this said sometimes to summarise the rock bottom of poverty and economic failure. Yet washing is carried on by the mistress of the well-to-do house more frequently than any other domestic work, including cooking and sewing. Women whose sewing activities are limited to the mending of their stockings, and whose cooking powers might be relied on only to cook the breakfast in an emergency, do a certain amount of light personal washing regularly. In fact, the woman who leaves her silk stockings to the care of her maid is unusual.

It is easy to see why a woman should attach importance to the washing of fragile and valuable garments. A dinner that has been spoiled has been spoiled for one evening only—in any case, its good effects are intended to last only for a few hours. In the case of a woollen pull-over or a silk petticoat being spoiled in the washing it is often spoiled for ever.

Silk Stockings.

As regards silk stockings, it is a good plan to have several pairs of them rather than a few pair that are washed too frequently. As soon as stockings begin to lose their freshness, it is advisable to wash them lightly rather than to wait an extra day or two when they may have become splashed with mud or marked by rain. They should be dipped in soapy water—soap-powder dissolved is excellent, or a soap jelly that has been made by boiling down small pieces of soap—until the water changes its colour, and this process would be repeated. Then the stockings shou'd be rinsed in lukewarm water, and hung where they are blown by the wind. If they are coloured they should not be hung in the sun. If black silk stockings are washed it is a good plan to add a little salt to the water. Some drops of methylated spirit helps to preserve the sheen of silk.

All silk underwear is best cleaned by continued dipping in lukewarm water in which a soap powder or a soap jelly has been dissolved. After a second washing it should be rinsed a few times in lukewarm water.

Do Not Wring Out.

Silk underwear and silk stockings should not be wrung out. This merely helps to wear out the silk. They should be freed of most of the water by gently squeezing. It must not be expected that this will leave the garments in as dry a condition as wringing would do.

There is no fixed time for ironing. Crepe-de-chine underwear should be ironed while it is definitely damp. Shantung should be ironed when it is dry. Washing satin must be carefully ironed at a certain stage of dampness, or it will be impossible to remove the creases.

Washing Woollens.

During the winter months the washing of woollen pullovers will occupy many people. All-woollen goods should be treated differently from those that are only a wool mixture. A good plan with a woollen pullover is to squeeze some of the water from it when it has gone through several soapy waters, and then roll it in a large dry towel. Two people can carry out this operation more effectively than one. The towel should be wound in opposite directions. In this way it will absorb much of the dampness from the pullover. Then the pullover should be laid flat on the floor with a clean piece of paper beneath it, or on a large kitchen table, and left to dry.

MOSLEM WEDDING RITES.

INDIAN PRINCES CLAIM THEIR BRIDES.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

NICE, Thursday.

Following the magnificent ceremony a week ago, uniting the two sons of the Nizam of Hyderabad to two Turkish Princesses, the ex-Caliph of Turkey officiated this afternoon at the Turkish religious ceremony, which was intended to have taken place in Hyderabad, but which, at the request of the Nizam, has instead been held on the Riviera.

On this occasion the atmosphere was more one of a smart West End wedding than of the Oriental ceremony which marked the proceedings last week, and crowds of excited women thronged the gates of the Palace.

The brides, who are the daughter and niece of the ex-Caliph, appeared wearing exquisite dresses with long trains, and carrying gorgeous bouquets. They were crowned with wreaths of orange-blossom.

In a close-fitting gown of ivory brocade, which set off to perfection her slim figure and dark hair, Princess Shahzadi, the elder of the brides, who is seventeen, appeared beautiful and stately; while Princess Hiluphar, her cheeks flushed with excitement, seemed even younger than her sixteen years.

The Princes, resplendent in native dress and bejewelled swords, and attended by native orderlies, clothed in magnificent uniforms and golden turbans, excited cries of admiration from the women sight-seers on their arrival.

SOUTH AFRICA AND GOLD STANDARD.

PROPOSAL FOR EXCHANGE POOL IN LONDON.

Mr. Havenga, the South African Minister of Finance, is expected to announce to-day the creation of a ten-million pounds exchange pool in London to meet trade demands and keep the Union on the gold standard while exports are abnormal. It is reported (says an Exchange message from Cape Town) that, if the scheme is adopted, part of the amount will be furnished from the reserve gold reserves and the remainder by commercial banks out of sterling balances in London.

IRISHMAN'S DIARY.

Gold in Arklow : The Andromedids : The Women of Mungret.
Free State Pennies : Memories of a Marshal.

Silk "Smuggling."

The recent disclosures concerning the activities of the special inquiry officers attached to H.M. Customs in shadowing silk smugglers remind me that Customs officers in the Free State are frequently amused at the trouble taken by some passengers to secrete lengths of silk. Silk in the piece is, I may explain, duty free over here. Not long ago, I am told, Customs officers observed a man walking down the gangway of a newly-arrived steamer in a strange manner. They touched him on the shoulder, and informed him that he would be required to undergo a detailed search in the Customs office. "The game is up," he admitted ruefully. "I'm a sailor home from China, and I've got fifteen yards of silk around me. It makes me feel like a blinkin' mummy." The officers embarrassed him by their hilarious laughter. "Not much to laugh about so far as I am concerned," he said mirthlessly. "I got this little lot through the English Customs O.K. and I didn't think I'd have any trouble getting past you boys. But no such luck." When the officers told him that the silk was not liable to duty in the Free State he used picturesque nautical language.

Memories of a Marshal.

I was interested to note the revival of an old legend which surrounds the death of the unfortunate Marshal Ney, "the bravest of the brave," as he was once described by Napoleon. This romantic fiction is to the effect that Ney, after having been sentenced to death for espousing the cause of his old master during the Hundred Days, was pardoned by Louis XVIII. and allowed to escape to the United States, where he is said to have opened a school and died at an advanced age. Once again, however, the voice of authority has made itself heard, and, with an imposing array of argument, seems to have dealt a mortal blow to this very interesting legend.

I am tempted to wonder how many of the controversialists who engaged upon this matter know where the gallant and unfortunate French soldier met his death before a Bourbon firing squad. It may be found to-day on the left bank of the Seine at Paris, and is marked by a statue of the Marshal which stands in front of La Closerie des Lilas. Until recently, a little grove of trees veiled the statue from the eyes of the public, and now, even although these have been uprooted by the service publique, few of the loungers on the Closerie terrace or of the passers-by, pay the slightest attention to the last tribute which France afforded to one of her most famous sons.

An Arklow Gold Mine.

Glancing through the "King's Customs" yesterday, I came across an interesting reference to a gold rush in County Wicklow. In 1795 the Secretary to the Lord Lieutenant informed the Board of Customs that a gold mine had been discovered at Arklow, and that thousands of people were rushing to the place and gathering the ore. Enterprising traders, incidentally, erected numerous whiskey booths for the refreshment of the amateur miners. The authorities directed the collector of Customs at Wicklow to proceed to Arklow and protect the ore, which was "the property of His Majesty's Government." The collector was, however, like most officials, a very prudent man. He replied that he was suffering from a bad attack of rheumatism, and, furthermore, that he could not obtain sufficient force to overawe the gold-digging peasantry. Eventually he obtained a military force which enabled him to "protect the ore."

The Andromedids.

The Andromedids are a remarkable meteor shower, nearly contemporary with the Leonids. Their radiant is situated near the third magnitude star, Gamma Andromedæ. There were notable displays of Andromedids in 1872 and 1885, in each instance on the night of November 27, and there were other appearances, though not so splendid, in 1892 and 1899, on the nights of November 23 and 24, and sometimes earlier in the month. The last showers of note occurred on November 21, 1904, when a considerable number of meteors were seen early on that night. They are supposed to have a period of 6-7 years. In the present year these meteors may be expected on the night of the 21st, between 8 and 10 o'clock, but there is an earlier maximum on that evening about 6.30, and there is also a later one between 2 and 3 on the next morning. Some traces of these meteors may also be observed on the night of the 23rd, and perhaps also on the nights of the 29th and 30th. Owing to the high altitude of their radiant, the Andromedids can be seen even after sunset. Indeed, the rich displays of 1872 and 1885 attracted the notice of observers about that hour.

Women of Mungret.

It is a notorious fact that scholars are impatient of criticism, and that not a few, having won their laurels, resent investigation of too close a nature into their accomplishments. True to-day, this was also true when the monks of Mungret were rivals for the palm of classic learning to the monks of Cashel. These latter determined to settle the matter by competition, and sent a challenge to Mungret, which was accepted. As the day of examination drew near, the monks of Mungret began to feel a slight sinking at the pit of the stomach—a sensation still known to examinees. They decided to attempt a ruse. Discovering the route to be followed by the delegates from Cashel, they dressed up a number of brothers as girls, and more as peasant labourers, and sent them along the road with instructions to get into converse with the visiting team of scholars, and then to address them in nothing but Latin or Greek. This was done. The Cashel men, accosted in the classic tongue by peasants, and particularly by dairy maids and apparent pot-wallopers, took qualms, paused and considered the position. Judging that Mungret learning must be immense so to impregnate the country, and especially the women, they held discretion the better part of valour and retraced their steps, leaving the palm to the challenged. To this day in Limerick a man whose intellectual "window-dressing" exceeds his solid lore, is alluded to as being "wise as the women of Mungret."

Our Currency Problem.

In a post-office the other evening I heard an Englishman advising his companion to change any Free State coins in her possession for British money before she left Ireland. The lady immediately opened her bag and inspected her silver. "There, that's one of them!" the man exclaimed. "Why, isn't that a real shilling?" she inquired. "No," he replied, "that's an Irish shilling."

This reminds me of the conversation which I heard on the Fishguard boat last summer, when two Welshmen discovered that they had a number of Free State pingins in their possession. "Never mind," one of them eventually said, "we can shove 'em in the gas meter, look you."

IN THE NORTHERN CAPITAL.

The Dublin Sweepstake : Marketing of Apples. Civil Service "Cuts" : Government Expenditure : Tourist Trophy Race. Lough Neagh Fisheries.

FROM OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.

BELFAST, Thursday.

THERE is no border in Ireland so far as the Free State Sweepstake is concerned, and at present Dublin is the great centre of attraction for the people of the Six Counties. Fifteen Ulster ticket-holders have drawn horses, which seems a goodly proportion of the total, and hopes are high that some of the lesser prizes may also come this way. This great gamble has caused more excitement throughout the province than the recent parliamentary elections; for the personal element predominates, and the imagination of thousands of the community—rich and poor—is stirred by the thought that fortune may smile on them. Although the sweepstake is not legal in the North, there appeared to be no difficulty in obtaining tickets, and a big number of them was purchased on this side of the border.

APPLE INDUSTRY.

The magnificent display of apples, graded and packed in boxes, at the Ulster Horticultural Society's Show, which was opened in Belfast yesterday, gives, perhaps, the best demonstration of the value of the Marketing of Fruit Act, about which there has been so much controversy lately. This measure applies to apples intended for export, and its provisions ensure that the produce of Ulster's orchards shall reach the cross-Channel centres in perfect condition and pleasing in appearance—an important factor when we have to compete against highly organised concerns from the Dominions and the Continent. Strangely enough, the Act does not affect consignments of apples sent to the Free State or sold for consumption in the Six Counties.

So far as the export trade is concerned, the old pernicious practice of "topping" has been abolished, so that the upper layer of apples gives a fair indication of what is beneath. No one can reasonably complain of such a provision, yet some people grumble at it. Measures of reform have rarely been accepted without protest; but in this case it is expected that there will be substantial developments, with consequent benefit to growers. The Acts which were passed relative to the grading and packing of eggs, as well as potatoes, raised storms of protest, but the enhanced reputation of these commodities in the British markets, together with their increased value, has shown the wisdom of the legislation passed for the improvement of such produce.

CIVIL SERVANTS' PAY.

According to its official speakers, the Civil Service has suffered more than any other body from the economic axe, no fewer than twenty-three "cuts" having been made in salaries within recent years. The result is discontent and the straining of loyalty throughout all departments. A meeting representing every branch of the Service was held in Belfast this week, at which there was some plain speaking, and the Government was warned of the dangerous state of affairs. It was revealed that repeated "cuts" had reduced salaries by as much as 40 per cent., and that there were 100,000 people in the Civil Service who were receiving an inclusive wage of less than £3 a week.

The twenty-three "cuts" referred to extend over a period of ten years. A man who got £4 a week in 1921 now gets only £2 2s.; those who then had £5 weekly now have only £2 17s., while that "rare bird," the £8-a-week-man, now receives only £4 18s. In these hard times the salaries mentioned do not err on the side of extravagance.

GOVERNMENT CRITICISED.

The findings of the Northern Government Committee on the financial relations between the State and local authorities are being strongly criticised by various public bodies affected, as the recommendations, if adopted, will cause substantial increases in the rates. The Belfast Corporation already has protested against the proposal to impose sixpence on the rates for the maintenance of Constabulary. Other councils have also objected to the imposition of fresh obligations, which they contend should be a Government responsibility.

The matter has been discussed by the Coleraine Borough Council, and the Mayor (Alderman Christie) contends that the Committee's report was discounted from the outset by the fact that the Committee was composed of five Government officials and three other gentlemen, while its recommendations were not even unanimous. In commenting on the proposals, Alderman Christie says that he is all for economy, but he considers it no economy to shift burdens from one back to another which is weaker.

TOURIST TROPHY RACE.

It seems that the International Tourist Trophy Motor Race is to be held next year over the County Down course, notwithstanding the efforts of the Manx authorities to secure it for their island. This decision will give pleasure to all sections of the community throughout Ireland; for, to a certain extent, the Free State participates in the benefits to be derived from the thousands of tourists who travel specially to Belfast to see the race. Many of them visit the Southern beauty spots before returning to their homes.

On Monday last Sir Dawson Bates, Northern Minister of Home Affairs, was in London, accompanied by Mr. F. Rogers, the chairman of the Race Committee, and Sir Dawson extended a cordial invitation to the Royal Automobile Club to hold the race, as usual, over the Dundonald-Newtownards-Comber circuit. Arrangements are being made for the fixture, and it is understood that those who intend to compete will be provided with the necessary information at an early date.

An appeal for funds was made by the Northern Minister of Commerce and the Race Committee some time ago, and it is also suggested that people who contribute small sums should join in the movement, as much of the success of the race depends on the financial support that it receives. No doubt, the necessary help will be forthcoming.

LOUGH NEAGH DISPUTE.

It is satisfactory to note that the conference which was held in Belfast yesterday between the Toombe Eel Fishery Company and representatives of the fishermen on Lough Neagh was of the most friendly nature. The subject under consideration was the conditions under which the fishermen are required by the company to operate on the lough. Included in the discussion was the number of boats to be licensed and the men's demand that they should have the right to market their own fish.

For many years there has been friction on the lough about the claims of the fishermen, and, if an amicable settlement could be arranged, it would foster harmony and probably inaugurate a new period of prosperity. The fishermen are a virile race, who have endured much hardship, but their numbers have dwindled sadly within recent years, and, if anything could be done to lighten their burden without injuring the rights of others, it would be well.

After some discussion, the conference was adjourned to enable both parties to obtain additional information, and it is stated in the official note that the conference will be resumed at an early date, "when it is hoped that a solution of the difficulties will be found on a basis satisfactory to all those who are interested."

SPRINGTIME IN MUSIC.

SCHUMANN SYMPHONY REVIVED.

(BY OBBLIGATO.)

FROM Mendelssohn's blithe "Spring Song" to that organistic music of Stravinsky in "Le Sacré du Printemps," we have proof in plenty that spring thoughts are as provocative of utterance to the poets who write in terms of music, as to those who try the bright ring of words. Among such utterances one will be more dear to us than another, accordingly, it may be, to the happiness of the time when we heard it first, or best.

I find no difficulty in saying which it is that I love best among the many passages of music that celebrate the season of spring. Many will agree with me in finding it in the first act of Wagner's music-drama, "Die Walkure."

THE MAGIC TOUCH.

"Die Walkure," you remember, begins with storm music. The door of Hunding's hut, which is the scene of the first act, swings open and Siegmund, exhausted and battered by the storm that overtook him on his way through the woods, is almost flung into the hut by the force of a gust. He just has strength to close the door by lying back against it. Then you forget the storm; for your thoughts soon are centred surely enough on what passes within the hut. Things move so fast, indeed, that Siegmund soon proposes to take Sieglinde away with him and wants to start there and then. He goes to the door. . . You, watching him, remember suddenly that the weather outside, when last you thought of it, was far from favourable to elopements; but now there is no sound of storm. Siegmund lifts the latch and opens the great wooden door. Lo, it is a lovely spring night, a fresh air is stirring the new leaves, and soft moonlight makes magic among the trees. A fresh breath of all this comes sweetly through the doorway and winds the spell of spring finally round the lovers. How do you know that? Why, because it is all in the music, which, after another moment, is welling up the melody of Siegmund's Song of Spring.

SCHUMANN'S DESIRE.

Drama and pictorial beauty, as well as music, are in this episode, so full of spring's magic; but its enjoyment belongs most truly of right to us, musical folk, admirers and students of Wagner and his works of genius. The main point at the moment, however, is that I ought not to be writing about that particular episode at all, because what prompted this article was the fact that the programme of orchestral music to be played at the Dublin Philharmonic Society's concert to-morrow afternoon in the Theatre Royal includes Schumann's Symphony No. 1, in B flat.

What set me thinking of Wagner's spring music was the fact that this First Symphony of Robert Schumann's is, to all intents and purposes, a "spring" Symphony. The composer did not give it that name expressly, but, besides the fact that it contains some of the happiest music of his happiest period of life and musical thought—the first years of his married life—we have, in letters and other records, Schumann's own notes of the spirit that should direct a performance of the work. He wanted thoughts of spring to perfume all its movements.

The Symphony is nearly ninety years old now—it was produced in 1841—but its spirit is fresh and beautiful still. Schumann has to give us his feeling about spring without the aid of drama and stage picture, so we must not compare its effect with that of Wagner's magical scene. At the least, spring is a beautiful subject for a Symphony.

At the same concert, Miss Rosamund Leonard will play the solo pianoforte in Beethoven's Concerto No. 3, and the rest of the orchestral programme, to be conducted by Colonel Fritz Brase, will comprise the Prelude to "Lohengrin" and Mendelssohn's music for "A Midsummer Night's Dream."

DUBLIN HOSPITAL'S SALE OF WORK.

OPENED BY VISCOUNTESS POWERSCOURT.

Viscountess Powerscourt opened a sale of articles made by inmates of the Royal Hospital for Incurables, Donnybrook, Dublin, at the hospital yesterday evening.

Sir Walter Boyd, Bart., K.C., who presided, said that they had about two hundred and forty patients at the hospital, and about a hundred of them were able to make articles, the proceeds from the sale of which would be for their own personal use. The hospital authorities extended facilities to these patients, and gave them every encouragement. It was very kind of Viscountess Powerscourt to come to open their sale, considering the amount of other charitable work that she had to do.

In declaring the sale open, Viscountess Powerscourt said that it was the first time that she had been in the hospital, but she assured those present that she would return at a later date and tour the premises. It was one of the most charitable and useful hospitals in Dublin, and in every way it was deserving of support. She asked those who were not able to make articles to accept a cheque from her for themselves.

The hospital was founded one hundred and eighty-eight years ago, and patients were admitted from all parts of Ireland, without religious distinction. The bank debt is over £6,000.

The platform party included:—The Rev. A. W. B. Mack, M.A.; Major Arthur Whewell, the Right Rev. Monsignor Dunne, P.P., V.G.; Miss Morton, Lady Superintendent; Dr. C. H. Adderley, Mr. Raymond Stephenson and Mr. W. V. Jones.

Stallholders included:—Lady Boyd, Miss Henshaw, Miss Mooney, Mrs. W. V. Jones, Miss G. Gardiner, Mrs. W. H. Fry, the Misses Fry, Harding, O'Sullivan and Bradshaw; Mrs. M. Legat, Miss M. Fitzgerald, Mrs. Pringle, the Misses Sibthorpe, Mrs. W. G. Lindsay, Sisters Shaw, Devitt, Rule and Brady. Those in the tearoom were:—Mrs. Headington Roche, the Misses Boland, Reddington Roche, Chance, Moore, Kelly and Marnon; Mrs. F. P. Ridgeway, Mrs. Esmonde, the Misses Malone, Brown and Sweetman; Mrs. A. T. Lee and Mrs. E. S. Lee.

PIANOFORTE RECITAL BY F. C. J. SWANTON.

ONE of the important items on the Dublin programme to-night is a pianoforte recital, the Prelude, Aria and Finale (C. Franck), by Francis C. J. Swanton, F., R.C.O. Mr. Swanton is one of the best known organists, and has equal fame as a pianist. This broadcast is timed for 9.20, and should on no account be missed. The Station Sextet, those very popular dispensers of music from 2RN, are giving operatic selections to-night, and will be supported by John Patterson (tenor) and Margaret Dempsey, who will contribute operatic solos. The selections will be given from the operatic works of Puccini, Braga, Bizet, Leoncavallo, Massenet and others. At 10 o'clock to-night the Ballinakill Traditional Band will broadcast jigs, reels, hornpipes and other tunes dear to the Irish, and should provide excellent entertainment for the half-hour given them in the programme. To complete the music from Dublin to-night there are duets for violins by Mrs. Larchet and Edith Kelly Lange, and a recital by the Station Celeste Combination.

DISARMAMENT IN THE AIR.

INTERNATIONAL PILOTS SUGGESTED.

"The World Crisis and Disarmament" was the subject of an address delivered by Dr. Hilda Clark at a meeting of the International Disarmament Declaration Committee, the Rev. Stephen S. Brown, S.J., presiding, in Wynn's Hotel, Dublin, last night.

Dr. Clarke said that it was commonly believed that disarmament was a matter for those Powers called "Great," and that only Great Powers possessed any influence at the League of Nations Council, but that was not correct. Small countries—the Irish Free State, for example—had often greatly influenced events at Geneva.

There were two crises at the moment, the lecturer declared, each of which had a profound effect on disarmament—the economic and financial crisis, and the crisis in the Far East

IN THE FAR EAST.

At present no country intended to go to war to conquer people, though it was hard to say what exactly the rights of Japan were: whether she had acted in self-defence or in a spirit of aggression.

Disarmament to be effective must be general: not warships alone must be reduced in number, but Armies and Air Forces must also be reduced in personnel and equipment. France was afraid of Germany's civilian air service, because it could easily be converted into a weapon of high offensive value. The only way to remove that fear, the lecturer suggested, was to internationalise all air services and man them with pilots of different nationalities, who would be under the control of the League of Nations. It would also have the effect of making the air routes geographical, and not strategical, as they were at present.

CORSICAN BANDIT WAR.

SPEEDY FINISH EXPECTED.

LAST OUTLAWS MAY SELL LIFE DEARLY.

FROM REUTER'S SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.

AJACCIO, Thursday.

All the wanted Corsican bandits are expected to be under lock and key within the next forty-eight hours, said General Fournier, who is in charge of the operations against them, to-day. He hopes that this may be accomplished without bloodshed, but fears that in their desperation many of the outlaws will attempt to sell their liberty dearly.

At two o'clock this morning, when all the law-abiding citizens of Corsica were in bed, I set out with General Fournier and his force in armoured cars from Ajaccio for the cross-roads six miles from the hillside village of Balogna. Other troops from Vico and Sagone also set out for the same destination, and by daybreak the village was occupied by three platoons and two armoured cars.

It was near Balogna that a carload of gendarmes was ambushed a few days ago, when two of them lost their lives. One bandit was also killed in the encounter.

THOROUGH SEARCH.

The bandits are said to be hidden in a deep valley encircled by hills, which the troops surrounded. Then gendarmes set about a search of the valley, while others made a house-to-house investigation throughout the village.

The result of this was that the Mayor and his secretary and two other persons suspected of having assisted the wanted fugitives were arrested. A quantity of guns and ammunition was seized, and in the course of the day, several persons having tried to slip through the police cordon, twenty were arrested.

As dusk began to fall the troops prepared to encamp for the night, and, as an extra measure of caution, the cordon round the village and the hills was doubled.

NET CLOSING ON SPADAS.

Curfew has been proclaimed at Balogna, and armoured cars and troops patrolling the surrounding country stop all cars and make travellers prove their identity.

Both Bornea and the brothers Spada, the chiefs of the wanted bandits, are known to be still on the island, although it was at one time thought that they had managed to make good their escape to the mainland. Yesterday a shepherd near Saint Andre L'Orsino declared that the Spadas entered his house and demanded food and shelter, which he did not dare refuse.

The elder Spada is said to have fainted during the meal and to have been brought round by his brother.

When they left the bandits forced the shepherd to hand over his mule, so that the weak brother would not be made weaker by having to walk.

Bornea is said to be near Proticcioli, to the south of here. He called yesterday at the house of a shepherd, with the usual demand for food. After he had refreshed himself he left, heading, so the shepherds say, for the south. Troops have gone to cut off his access to the sea.

The suicide of a groom, Joseph Taaffe, was recalled at Riverstown District Court (Co. Cork) yesterday, when Frederick W. Mackenzie, Poulnacurra, Riverstown, was summoned for being in possession of a revolver and ammunition without a permit. John O'Sullivan, who said that he was employed by the defendant, said that on September 4 last he went into the harness room, where he found Taaffe shot dead, with the revolver by his side. Evidence was given by Civic Guards that twenty-four rounds of ammunition also had been found in the house of the defendant, who said that the revolver had been in his possession since he left the Army. He did not think it necessary to take out a permit. A fine of £1 was imposed and the revolver forfeited.

THE ELECTRICITY SUPPLY BOARD.

MINISTER AND ITS FINANCES.

In reply to Mr. LEMASS (F.F., Dublin S.) and Mr. MacENTEE (F.F., Dublin County), who asked questions in the Dáil yesterday regarding the finances of the Electricity Supply Board,

Mr. E. BLYTHE, Minister for Finance, said that he was circulating with the official report a table containing most of the information for which deputies asked. He had not yet appointed any dates, periods or amounts for the repayment of advances by the Electricity Supply Board for the repayments of advances by the Board under Sections 14 and 15 of the Electricity Supply Act, 1927; in any event, repayment could not commence before July 1st, 1933, and interest was being charged at the rate of 5½ per cent. Interest payments were not at present in arrear.

He was not in a position to say to what extent interest payments by the Board were made for moneys advanced out of the Central Fund. Apart from other considerations, it was possible that the Board, in anticipation of the advances, occasionally used its revenue to meet commitments in respect of capital expenditure. Any payments made in respect of interest from the Shannon Fund before transfer of the Shannon Works to the Board were, of course, made from sums advanced out of the Central Fund, as the Shannon Fund had no other source of income.

The following is the table circulated by Mr. Blythe:—

SUPPLY BOARD'S REQUESTS.

Replying to Mr. R. Briscoe (F.F., Dublin, S.),

Mr. McGILLIGAN, Minister for Industry and Commerce, said that the Electricity Supply Board had requested advances to date totalling £2,767,385. It would, he said, be clearly impossible to specify the innumerable purposes for which such advances were required; £751,000 had been paid to the Board on his certificate. No demand was made to him for moneys for payment of overtime to employés.

In further reply to Mr. Briscoe, Mr. McGILLIGAN said that it was impossible to specify the numerous purchases by the Board, and he refused to circulate the information. It would take a lot of time to segregate the items.

By eleven votes to nine Longford County Council decided to instal electric fires in the Council offices on the ground that they would be more economical than coal. Mr. R. J. Tuite, who proposed that the fires be not installed, said that he knew where they had to be taken from a public hall and coal reverted to. The Chairman (Mr. Walsh) and others said that the coal was English, and by installing electric fires they would be supporting their own industry.

GARDEN PLOTS FOR UNEMPLOYED.

BELFAST PARKS COMMITTEE'S ACTION.

BELFAST, Thursday.

THE provision of allotment gardens for the unemployed was considered to-day at a meeting of the Parks Committee of the Belfast Corporation, and the following resolution was passed unanimously:—

"That, with the object of enabling local authorities, during the continuance of the depression in trade and consequent unemployment, to promote the cultivation of land by unemployed or impoverished men and women in gardens and allotments, thus helping such persons to provide the best and most wholesome foodstuffs for their homes, occupation for the body, and interest for the mind, and to prove that they are willing and able to do good service for the community, the Northern Minister of Home Affairs be requested to submit to the next session of Parliament a bill on the lines of the Local Government (Allotments and Land Cultivation) (Ireland) Act, 1917, with the necessary modifications, including the provision that unemployment benefits shall not be affected by the cultivation of a garden or allotment, so long as the plot holder remains ready to accept at once any offer of suitable employment."

SEA FISHERIES ASSOCIATION.

AN ENCOURAGING REPORT.

MARKETING FACILITIES FOR FREE STATE FISH.

THE first ordinary meeting of the Sea Fisheries Association of the Irish Free State was held at 45 Kildare street, Dublin, yesterday. There was a large attendance of members, and the counties represented were Louth, Dublin, Wicklow, Wexford, Cork, Kerry, Galway, Mayo and Donegal. Mr. A. O'Brolchain presided.

In the course of their report the Committee stated that during the past year they had received a large number of applications for the supply of boats and gear, and had given considerable time to the examination of the question of the most suitable types of boats and engines for the different classes of fishing. They were at present carrying out trials under working conditions of semi-Diesel engines, which showed promise of affording the most trustworthy and economic power for boats 33 feet in length and upwards. They had placed on order as many boats as the building yards in the country would be able to turn out for some time to come.

The report was adopted.

DISTRIBUTION SCHEME.

The Chairman, in his address, stated that during the year the Committee had been engaged in works of organisation and in laying sure foundations for the re-equipment and development of the inshore fisheries.

The applications for membership at the date of the report numbered 1,140, and the enrolled members 650, which was a satisfactory and encouraging position at this stage. The great appeal which the Association would make to the fishing community as a whole would be in the provision of marketing facilities which would enable the fisherman to be assured of a constant market for the whole of his catch at a fair price. A scheme had been prepared under which the country was divided into thirteen areas for the distribution of fish.

FREE STATE IMPORTS.

Although the consumption of fresh fish per head of the population in the Free State was only some four and a quarter lbs. as against 32 lbs. in Great Britain, they imported fresh fish to the value of upwards of £180,000 per year in addition to cured and tinned fish to the value of upwards £160,000 per year. They were confident that the consumption of fresh fish would be greatly increased if regular supplies in good condition were available. In many parts of the country fresh fish was not obtainable, and in quite large towns one could not find a single fish shop. They were quite satisfied that the large import of fish could be replaced by landings at their own ports, and they thought it was contrary to the natural order that this country should be dependent for its supplies on outside sources

MORE EMPLOYMENT.

They were taking steps to organise the supply, by steam trawlers, of the present requirements of fish over and above what could be furnished by the inshore fishermen, and they would further take steps to see that fish was more readily procurable throughout the country, the consumption being thereby increased. That step would not only restore the balance of trade, but would open up for the Snorstat fishermen new avenues of employment, and would give a large amount of employment ashore, at the ports, and in handling and transport. He hoped to see these arrangements in operation at the beginning of the new year. The committee was carrying on experiments in oyster propagation, and had proposals in hand for the erection of mussel purifying plant.

Senator Mrs. Brown asked if anything was being done with regard to the depredations of foreign trawlers along the coast.

The Chairman replied that there was a bill to be introduced shortly dealing with that matter.

BRITISH TRADE WITH INDIA.

FAVOURED BY PRESENT CONDITIONS.

An informative statement on the recent progress of trade between the United Kingdom and India was circulated yesterday by Major Colville (Secretary to the Overseas Trade Department), in reply to Mr. Hammersley, the Conservative member for Stockport.

Referring to the temporary suspension by the United Kingdom of the gold standard and to the linking of the rupee to sterling at the existing rates of 1s. 6d., the Senior Trade Commissioner in India, in a recent despatch, said the statement indicated "that, in his opinion, this measure could not fail to act as a powerful stimulus to India's exports to countries which are still on the gold standard, among which are some of her principal customers, e.g., the United States, Japan, Germany, France and Italy.

"Conversely, the depreciation of sterling now enables United Kingdom exporters to quote rupee prices below those which, in many cases, can be quoted by manufacturers and exporters in countries which still adhere to the gold standard, notably Germany, Japan and the United States, who may be regarded as our keenest rivals in the Indian markets.

BETTER PROSPECTS.

"Other things being equal, therefore, there should be, in terms of rupees, a considerable advance in price of India's principal agricultural products, with a corresponding increase in the purchasing power of the people. This increased purchasing power may be expected to be reflected in a greater demand for imported goods.

"It is to be hoped that the United Kingdom manufacturers, by reason of this advantage in exchange, will take every opportunity to secure an increased proportion of the trade available."

The Senior Trade Commissioner stated that at the present time there appeared to be a more optimistic undertone in the Calcutta market, and that slightly more interest is being shown in Lancashire goods; items, such as cotton prints, which have been entirely neglected for many months, are now attracting attention.

INTEREST IN BRITISH PRODUCTS.

The Commissioner also referred to the fact that there has recently been a very heavy fall in the prices which holders are demanding for Japanese goods in stock, and a material decline in the rates of Indian mill goods.

Since the suspension of the gold standard the prices of Japanese, Italian and other Continental piece goods have all advanced on the Indian market, with the result that some interest is taken by local importers in United Kingdom products at their current prices.

"It would be idle," concludes the statement, "to hold out hopes of greatly improved trade for Lancashire in the Indian market until some hardening takes place in the world prices of the commodities of which India is normally an exporter on a considerable scale, such as jute, raw cotton, cereals, hides, tea, oil seeds, etc."

BROTHER'S KINDNESS REMEMBERED.

SLIGO HAMLET DRAWS A HORSE.

"SWEEP" TICKETS THAT CAME BACK HOME.

Stories of lucky drawers of horses in the Irish Hospitals' Sweepstake continue to come in from the country, and in many of them there is romance.

The way in which some tickets went from Ireland to America and then came back to bring good fortune to sixteen people in a tiny County Sligo hamlet reads like one of those things that in real life just "don't happen."

Drumfin lies mid-way between Ballymote and Riverstown, on the main road from Dublin to Sligo, and Drumfin is very small. Nevertheless, its few inhabitants take a lively interest in things that matter, and one of these is the Irish Hospitals' Sweepstakes.

Some months ago Mr. John Anderson sent a book of tickets to his daughter in America to sell to the inhabitants of that far land. For some reason unknown trade was bad, and four of the tickets came back to Drumfin.

Mr. Anderson, realising that he was up against a problem of importance to the whole community, roused the village. Fifteen stalwarts came to his aid, and, to the honour of Drumfin, the necessary purchase price of the four tickets was raised.

If Sans Espoir wins the Manchester November Handicap what will happen in Drumfin?

Mr. Anderson and his fifteen supporters would be in a position holding almost boundless possibilities. They might buy up the hamlet, or pension off its handful of inhabitants!

Drumfin was an obscure hamlet in County Sligo. It is still a hamlet in County Sligo—but it is no longer obscure.

SOUTH AFRICA'S LUCK IN THE "SWEEP."

IRISHMAN'S HOPE OF A VISIT TO CORK.

South Africa has momentarily cast aside the gold standard problems, and even the opening of the special session of Parliament is overshadowed by the intense interest in the Irish Sweepstake draw.

The Union has again been blessed by the turn of the "wheel of fortune," and the unusually large number of successes illustrates the increasing demand for tickets in overseas lotteries, despite the most stringent restrictions.

Among the lucky ticket holders is Charles Shearer, an Irish steel rigger, and if Bonny Boy II. runs into either first, second or third place, Shearer intends to spend a holiday in his native Cork.

CUBAN DIVORCE AND MARRIAGE.

DUKE OF MANCHESTER'S ANNOUNCEMENT.

The Duke of Manchester announces his intention to go to Cuba to institute proceedings for the dissolution of his marriage to the present Duchess of Manchester, who applied for and obtained a decree nisi against him in the High Court on May 11.

"When I obtain my divorce in Cuba, which I feel certain of doing without any difficulty," said the Duke, "I shall immediately re-marry, and I expect to return to England sometime during April of next year.

"As a Cuban divorce is not recognised in England, although it is recognised throughout the rest of the world, I anticipate I shall be charged with bigamy. The only way in which I can then be tried is before a court of my peers."

The Duke said that this procedure recalled what took place in the case of the late Earl Russell who obtained a divorce in America and re-married there. He was charged with bigamy on his return to England, was tried by his peers, and sentenced to a period of imprisonment.

HUNT FOR PIRATE'S TREASURE.

£12,000,000 SAID TO BE AT STAKE.

BELFAST EX-M.P. JOINS THE EXPEDITION.

ANOTHER expedition is to be made in search of the £12,000,000 treasure which is believed to be buried at Cocos Island, says the Evening Standard.

The leaders of this enterprise are four Englishmen—Sir Malcolm Campbell, Mr. K. Lee Guinness, Mr. W. D. Allen, ex-M.P. for West Belfast; Mr. John De Forest, and a rich young American, Mr. Boy Scheftel.

All are well known. Sir Malcolm Campbell and Mr. Lee Guinness are household words in the motoring world. Mr. John De Forest, the son of the wealthy Baron De Forest, and Mr. Boy Scheftel are embryo golf champions.

Mr. W. D. Allen, a former member of Parliament, is now a member of the New Party.

All five men have put up an equal financial stake, and will share equally in any treasure that may be found.

The expedition will start early in January and will comprise a yacht and an airplane.

Cocos Island, which must not be confused with the Cocos-Keeling group in the Indian Ocean, where the Emden was destroyed, is a palm-covered, picturesque, solitary islet, four to five hundred miles south-west of Panama.

It is the treasure island of real life, and was a famous haunt and shelter of pirates.

The magnet which has attracted so many expeditions in the past is the treasure of Don Pedro Benito, a pirate of the blood and thunder school, who was finally captured by the British man-of-war Magician and strung up at the yard-arm.

In 1822, feeling that he had made things too hot for himself, Benito made with all his loot for Cocos Island. When he had buried his treasure he, like Flint in Stevenson's "Treasure Island," slew those of his crew who knew his secret.

Of the previous expedition to recover Benito's treasure two were conducted by British warships. Some twenty-five years ago Earl Fitzwilliam set out on a similar enterprise. He and several of his party were injured in a landslide.

Since the war there have been at least two expeditions, including a Canadian expedition organised by Captain Polkinghouse, formerly of Plymouth. All these attempts have failed.

Sir Malcolm Campbell, who visited the island in 1925, believes firmly in the possibility of recovering the treasure.

BELFAST'S NEW WOMEN'S CLUB.

BELFAST, Thursday.

It has been decided to form a Soroptimists' Club in Belfast. The Soroptimists' Clubs are for professional and business women, and are conducted upon the lines of the Rotary Club movement. Active membership of a Soroptimist Club is restricted to one member from each profession or business who is prominent in her own sphere and over twenty-one years of age. The object of the association is to encourage high standards of professional and business life, to promote the spirit of service and true friendship among its members, to encourage civic movements for the betterment of local and general social conditions. It also aims at encouraging the spirit of friendship among representative women of different nations in the interest of international peace. The movement started in America, and the first club was formed in California in 1921. There are now twenty clubs and branches in Great Britain. Miss B. Catto, M.A., of Glasgow, President of the Soroptimist Clubs of Great Britain, visited Belfast yesterday, and following a meeting with a number of Belfast women interested in the movement, it was decided to form a club in Belfast.

Gilbert Storey (45), of Edward street, Hetton, was killed, and Henry Wilson (34), of Girven terrace, Hetton, was injured by a runaway tub in the underground workings of Elemore Colliery, near Hetton, Co. Durham, yesterday.

SHORT DAY IN SENATE.

FINANCE MEASURE PASSED.

OTHER BILLS ADVANCED A STAGE.

In the Free State Senate yesterday the Finance (Increase of Income Tax) Bill, 1931, was passed through its Report and final stages without further discussion.

TOWN TENANTS.

The Committee stage of the Town Tenants' Bill was resumed.

Many amendments were considered, and some of them were held over, at the suggestion of the Minister for Justice, for further consideration on the Report stage.

Mr. DOUGLAS asked if, in the event of the Town Tenants' Bill becoming law, it would override the effect of the Rent Restrictions Act.

Mr. FitzGERALD-KENNEY replied that if the Rent Restrictions Act were continued, and it was in the schedule of Expiring Laws Continuance Bill to be continued, no landlord would be able to regain possession of any premises which were protected by the Act.

Mr. DOUGLAS—It will override this, the Town Tenants Bill.

Mr. FitzGERALD-KENNEY—Yes.

On the motion of Mr. Wilson, a new section was agreed to, to the effect that where a building lease was terminated by ejectment for non-payment of rent, breach of covenant, or otherwise, no sub-lease of the land or any part of it comprised in the building lease which was an immediate sub-lease, shall be terminated by the ejectment or re-entry.

The Committee stage was passed, and the Report stage was fixed for December 2nd.

APPRENTICESHIP BILL.

Mr. FARREN moved an amendment to Section 8, to regulate the system of fees and premiums in respect of the employment of apprentices in certain trades. He said that the system or practice had caused hardships to apprentices and their guardians.

Mr. JOHNSON said that it was well known that employers had made the exploitation of the premium system a source of income. They drew a sum of money for teaching ignorant young country boys a trade. Farmers were sometimes anxious to get their sons into an industry, and were willing to pay something. There was a considerable number of employers who got £20, £30 or £40 a year from quite a number of apprentices in order that they might be taught a trade, and the apprentices learned nothing. Under this Act employers would be obliged to teach their apprentices without the latter being fleeced. There should be no premiums except in conformity with the rules made under this bill.

Mr. McGILLIGAN, Minister for Industry and Commerce, said that if the amendment were agreed to it would not stop the abuse, but it would prevent a number of employers from coming within the scope of the bill. Until the Committee made a rule regarding premiums no premiums should be allowed.

Mr. BARRINGTON said that there were many trades in which premiums were necessary and justifiable.

The amendment was, by leave, withdrawn.

The Committee stage was passed, and the House adjourned until next Wednesday week, December 2nd.

WATERWAYS, LIMITED.

FROM THE LIFFEY TO THE RIVER SHANNON.

IX.—Explicit.

AND now that our voyage is finished and the Banba tucked safely into her berth for the winter, let me speak a few words for the benefit of those who would follow in our course.

We had intended to steer along the Grand Canal to where it meets the Shannon at Shannon Harbour. We would proceed down the river as far as Limerick, then up again, through Lough Derg and Lough Ree, as far as Carrick-on-Shannon, down again to Shannon Harbour, and home through the Grand Canal. In other words, we would accomplish the whole course of the Grand Canal between Limerick and Shannon Harbour twice, and virtually the whole Shannon twice. As I have told, the gods were not good to us, and we only accomplished half our projected journey.

Yet no holiday could have been finer. The high lights, of course, were the last four miles of the Grand Canal, Lough Derg, and the river between Victoria Lock and Portumna. They tell me that there are more beautiful bits between Athlone and Carrick-on-Shannon. If so, they must be very lovely.

VULGAR ERRORS.

But it is not my business to rhapsodise. Suffice it to say that anybody who wishes to know the real Ireland cannot do better than buy or borrow a motor boat and try his luck on our route. He will pass the extremes of poverty and wealth, of desert and cultivation, of the fair and, very occasionally, of the foul; and he will be clear of the recognised beauty spots—which can be a blessing. If nothing untoward happens, the holiday will cost him little enough once he has paid his canal fees; and he will breathe the purest air in Ireland, so long as the exhaust of his engine behaves itself.

Let me here dispose of the commonest objection to this particular holiday—that the Grand Canal is full of weeds, which wrap themselves around your propeller every half-mile or so. There are weeds, of course, but they are deep, and they are close to the banks. If you steer your course along the middle of the canal, there is nothing to fear from weeds; and, even if an approaching barge compels you to pull into the bank, it is ninety to one that the weeds will not be able to reach your propeller. On a couple of occasions, through inadvertence at the wheel, we found ourselves in what appeared to be a miniature Sargasso Sea, but the weeds were well below the surface, and we passed over unscathed, like the Israelites. When the Banba was beached at Killaloe there was not a trace of weed upon her shaft.

BUGBEARS.

The second objection is rather better founded. People familiar with the Grand Canal's course through Dublin cannot foresee any pleasure in a trip where you must undergo the nuisance of passing through a lock every few hundred yards. Now it is true that the first day out from Ringsend becomes pretty tedious. The locks seem to come in bunches. There are half a dozen locks within a couple of hundred yards of one another, then a run for, perhaps, half a mile, then another bunch of locks, and so on, until you are thoroughly sick of the sight of a lock.

On the other hand, about half the total number of locks are in the neighbourhood of Dublin. After the first day they become fewer and fewer, so that you come across stretches where there is no lock for several miles. One great stretch between Robertstown and Tullamore runs for twenty miles without a single lock; there are others of nine or ten miles, and any amount of five or six miles at a time. Now and then, in fact (remember that we made the outward journey from choice at an average speed of four knots), we found ourselves sighing for a lock to break the monotony.

Talking about locks, I am reminded that we started upon our journey with the haziest idea of how a canal works. Where, for instance, did it get its water from? We had assumed that the Shannon filled the Grand Canal, which sank gradually until it reached sea level at the Liffey. The trouble was this hypothesis would put the Shannon where it met the canal, at a most prodigious height above sea level; and we felt dimly that there must be some other explanation. There is, and here I pass it on to others whose ignorance may be equal to ours.

THE RIDDLE OF THE CANAL.

At a place called Lowtown, some distance beyond Robertstown, the Grand Canal reaches its highest level. A stream flows into it, and this stream is the canal's feeding-bottle. Since here is the very highest point, half of the water supplied flows downwards to Dublin, and the other half downwards towards the Shannon. The water at Lowtown is so clean that, entering the lock, you can see the stones which compose it at the bottom, and if you drop anything overboard you can see it lying fifteen feet or so below. Such cleanliness may seem strange to anyone who has looked into a lock at Dublin; but the bogs do not take long to darken the water on its downward course. One is apt to dislike the water so darkened, but there is no need to be fastidious. We turned up our noses at it at first, until we found that it was much handier to draw a bucket from the canal than to walk for spring water with a couple of pitchers slung on our backs. Actually, for all its muddy appearance when seen in bulk, the canal water in the boglands is as clean and tasteless as anyone could want.

LAST WORDS.

A final tip. You will not want a dinghy on the Grand Canal. At most places you can approach the bank near enough to land by a mild jump. On the Shannon, however, it is just as well to have a dinghy if you wish to land between the recognised stopping places. We were perfectly content to carry on all day, tying up for the night at the handiest town; but there are unapproachable spots here and there where it would have been pleasant to disembark if we had only possessed a dinghy.

But sad experience reminds me that a dinghy is very desirable on Lough Derg, where the storms are. Because of the same storms, see that your engine, if not decked in, at least is securely covered. And do not venture out on that lake unless the look of the weather promises perfect peace.

"THE FOUR HORSEMEN."

"The Four Horsemen," of Waterford, who drew British Sailor. Left to right: Messrs. H. Kennedy, A. P. O'Brien, J. Hennehy and W. Baldwin. The two named first were also successful in the last sweepstake.

The Botanic Gardens.

AUTUMN ATTRACTIONS

OPTIMISM, as shown by the constant renewal of brightly-hued plants and flowers in order to combat the depressing external influences, is the dominant note of the Botanic Gardens at present. Although the summer leaves and blossoms are fast disappearing, their places are filled almost at once, and inside the conservatories it may be said to be perpetual summer. The Lily House has undergone its annual transformation, and where the nympheae flourished the chrysanthemums now raise their great feathery heads. There is, indeed, a magnificent array of these showy plants, and they are the best sight at present in the Gardens. A fine collection of scarlet salvias is another welcome spectacle. In the Cactus House are a number of quaint and beautiful mesembryanthemums, whose charming blooms stand out in refreshing contrast to the fleshy green leaves around them. Passing on to the Cool House we find little, save for several exquisite tibouchinas from Brazil crowned with rich purple flowers. The winter cleaning up is going on everywhere, and the gardeners are in the throes of repotting, pruning and clearing away on all sides. They totter around under the weight of mighty pots, and many serious discussions take place about the disposal of the shrubs and plants. The Stove House, always a safe place to visit, has some beautiful shrubs in flower. There are some dichrosandrae, with clustters of blooms that resemble a grape hyacinth at a little distance, and an ixora, with delicate red flowers. Outside the Orchid House there is a fine bed of red calceolarias, and the softly-hued begonias inside the door hint at the exotic splendours further on. Pendant from the roof of this house are a number of columnea gloriosa, draped with woolly racemes of dark green leaves, studded with oddly-shaped dull red flowers like hungry beak-shaped mouths. The cypripedia are out in great force, and easily bear away the honours for the largest number of plants in flower. There are, in addition, some lovely cattleyas and slender sprays of odontoglossa.

THE PALM HOUSE.

The Palm House has undegone extensive treatment, and now freshened and cleaned up is a delightful place to roam about in. Far up towards the roof is a slender iron walk for the convenience of the gardeners. Greatly daring, I begged permission to ascend it and view the jungle from above. The view was enchanting; with a very little stretch of the imagination it was possible to imagine that a real tropical forest lay below. Lofty palms were on every side, and down below a thick undergrowth of lesser palms and cycads, a huge datura spread its vast loose leaves by my side, and the giant bamboos swayed behind. The wall at the end was so draped with creepers as to be almost invisible, and the clear yellow flowers of a solandra gleamed through the tangle. It was some time before I could tear myself away and return to the drab world without the glass.

The Camelia House provided a striking contrast to the lush tropic greens of the Palm House, and many bright flowers cheered the eye. Several fine camelias are out, and must soon be covered with waxy blooms. A bank of delicate primulas, a fine show of nerines, and a collection of magnificent cyclamens are other noteworthy sights in this house. The bustling gardeners on every walk promise a wealth of colour during the coming winter and next spring. A feature is the number of pansies that are being planted on all sides. They appear to be of every colour—and will delight many an eye when nature is at her saddest.

BY THE RIVER.

Although the wind is cold, a ramble among the conifers along the Tolka is always pleasant. This is a comparatively deserted portion of the Gardens, and the solitude and fragrant piny smell of its trees make it particularly acceptable to people who visit the grounds in order to escape from the hurly burly of the city. Many of the trees and shrubs assume a lovely death-robe when touched by the frosts, and the maples are pale rose and gold in their autumn cerements.

DUBLIN DISTRICT COURT.

BANK DRAFTS FOR SWEEP TICKETS.

CHARGES AGAINST AN ENGLISHMAN.

(BEFORE MR. LITTLE.)

William Henry Barr (39), a greengrocer, with an address at Market square, Leighton Buzzard, Bedfordshire, was charged on remand with uttering at the offices of the Irish Hospitals' Trust, Ltd., a forged draft of the Northern Bank, Belfast, for the sum of £80.

Detective Sergeant Wyer said that he now proposed to put forward two further similar charges against the defendant. One would be in connection with a draft of the National Bank, Old Bond street, London, and the other of the Hibernian Bank, O'Connell street, Dublin.

Mr. H. A. Porter Taylor, solicitor, appeared for the defendant.

Mr. John A. Jameson, of the National Bank, College Green, gave evidence of the receipt of a draft which was handed in and cashed by him on the 18th of May last. The draft was returned from London, and was eventually returned to him by the Hospitals Trust, Ltd.

To Mr. Taylor—The defendant is very like the man who paid for the draft. There would have been a number of drafts at that time of the year.

Mr. Joseph Cahill, teller in the Hibernian Bank, O'Connell street, gave evidence respecting a draft for £8 which was issued on the 18th of May last. The draft had been converted from £8 to £80.

Mr. Francis Flanagan, a clerk in the Hibernian Bank, College Green, deposed to an advice note respecting a draft which was issued on the 18th of May last for £8.

Detective Sergeant Wyer deposed that at Leighton Buzzard Police Station he showed a notebook to the accused, and then defendant admitted that the entries in it were in his (defendant's) handwriting. The notebook was, among other property, handed over to him by the Leighton Buzzard police.

He found that all the names and addresses in the book had appeared on the counterfoils of sweep tickets handed in by the defendant to the Trust with the draft.

When the new charges were read over to the defendant, he said: "I have nothing to say."

Captain A. J. Quirke, a handwriting expert, deposed to the similarity of the handwriting in several of the documents in the case. He had only got short notice of the matter, and, therefore, could not go into details.

The defendant was again remanded in custody for a week.

(BEFORE MR. HANNAN.)

Patrick Donnelly, a registered bookmaker, of 74 Marlborough street, was prosecuted for making alterations or erasures on an official betting sheet between 30th July and 18th August.

Defendant said that he could not understand the thing.

Mr. Hannan convicted and imposed a fine of £500, mitigated to £125.

MILK STORED IN OUT-HOUSE.

Patrick Jordan, milk purveyor, of 11½ Arbour place, was prosecuted for depositing milk intended for sale in a building where it would be liable to become infected by offensive, noxious substances.

Michael Murphy, Corporation inspector, deposed to finding the milk—about three gallons in all—in an outhouse, which was unfit for storing milk for sale. Defendant said that he had not had milk there since. A fine of 10s. 6d. was imposed.

PENNY PER WEEK AND A COTTAGE.

At Lucan District Court yesterday, before District Justice Reddin, John Cromer, Lucan, sought possession of a herd's cottage at Lucan, occupied by John Early.

Mr. Cromer said that he purchased Mr. Colthurst's interest in the Lucan Demesne. He asked Early to give up possession of the cottage, but he failed to do so.

Defendant said that he was made caretaker and was to be paid one penny per week, but as he had not been paid that sum he said the agreement was terminated.

MR. R. J. CORBALLIS'S ESTATE.

The estate of Mr. Richard John Corballis, J.P., of Rosemount, Milltown, Co. Dublin, who died on September 23rd last aged 100, included £64,502 13s. 11d. in England, making a total of £500,711 9s. 5d. Details of the bequests were published on November 4th.

Mr. Patrick Lennane, of 11 Ballymun road, Glasnevin, Dublin, who died on 16th May last, left personal estate in England and the Irish Free State valued at £5,024 8s. 1d. After the death of his widow he bequeaths £50 to the St. Vincent de Paul Society Night Shelter, Back lane, Dublin, and £50 to the Magdalen Asylum, Drumcondra, for charitable purposes.

General Smuts, the newly-elected Rector of St. Andrews University, has sent the following telegram to the students:—"Many thanks. Pleased and proud to be Rector of your ancient university, and look forward to visiting it in the near future."

WEATHER FORECAST.

General Inference.—A depression off North-West Ireland continues to fill up, and an associated trough of low pressure extends to the Bay of Biscay and is moving east. Further depressions are indicated in the Greenland-Iceland area. Occasional rain or showers will occur in the east, and showers elsewhere, but some fair periods are probable generally. Later, conditions are likely to deteriorate again in the extreme west.

North-West, North-East, South-East and South-West Ireland.—Moderate or fresh winds from between west and south, perhaps freshening later in coastal areas; showers and fair periods at first, probably further rain later; moderate temperature.

Irish Sea and St. George's Channel.—Moderate or fresh southerly winds, veering to west; showers; sea moderate.

At a meeting of Leinster milk producers in Dublin yesterday the Chairman (Mr. C. M. Byrne, Chairman of the Wicklow County Council) declared that, if milk producers could not get a better price by peaceful means, they would have no hesitation in remedying the position by "other legitimate means."—(Page 9.)

Cash prizes amounting to over £140,000 were drawn from the big drum at the Plaza, Dublin, yesterday, as consolation prizes for subscribers to the Hospitals Trust Sweepstake.—(Pages 4, 5 and 9.)

GREAT BRITAIN.

The Government's Anti-Dumping Bill was read a third time in the House of Commons last night by a majority of 285 votes.—(Page 10.)

The Greek Premier, addressing Parliament, suggested that Britain might divide Cyprus as a solution of the Cypriote Nationalist agitation.—(Page 8.)

Japan has challenged the League of Nations by declaring that she will not evacuate Manchuria until a new treaty has been negotiated directly with China embodying her demands.—(Page 9.)

The German Government has decided to request the convocation of a special Advisory Committee of the Bank for International Settlements to consider Germany's capacity to pay-reparations.—(Page 10.)

FINANCIAL.

In Lombard street stringency in loans continued, borrowers paying 5½ per cent. Discount rates remained very firm.—(Page 14.)

German Debts.

After much discussion France and Germany are said to have agreed upon the text of a Note which the latter country will send to-day to the Bank of International Settlements at Basel. In this Note Germany asks for the convocation of the Young Plan Consultative Committee, in order that it may review her capacity to pay the suspensory portion of the annuities for which the Plan provides. This step in itself involves no breach of faith; but it is an open secret that the Germans, driven by necessity, are anxious to raise the whole question of reparations, whether conditional or unconditional, in conjunction with their short-term debts. The reasons for such anxiety are not far to seek. In the first place, the Hoover moratorium, like all good things, will come to an end; and the Germans, naturally enough, desire to make full use of the present holiday to ensure that payments, when—and if—they are resumed, shall bear less hardly than was their wont heretofore. In the next place, the internal condition of the Fatherland is such that the Reich Government does not care to contemplate what may happen if the excited citizens are called upon to bear the disappointment which the resumption of the Young Plan payments must entail. The recent elections in Hesse spoke with no uncertain voice on this subject. Thirdly, the German Government recognises that a revulsion against reparations has begun to manifest itself in several parts of the world; and, lastly, it really believes that the nation cannot pay its short-term debts and the conditional annuities without risk of bankruptcy.

German indebtedness to-day, like all Gaul in another age, may be divided into three parts, two of which are governed by the Young Plan. These two are the conditional and unconditional annuities, which, spread over sixty years from the date of the Plan's adoption in 1929, were equivalent to a capital sum of £2,375,000,000. Some £41,000,000 will represent the unconditional proportion of these annuities payable at the expiry of the Hoover holiday, for which, as arrangements stand, no further moratorium can be asked. The problem of the conditional balance, no doubt, will be viewed with great sympathy by the Consultative Committee. Germany's third liability is her short-term credits, £370,000,000 of which fall due on February 29th. Here is the immediate crisis; for Germany's attitude concerning them is thought to be that, unless the Bank of France is willing to re-discount them, the Reich will be forced to "hammer" itself. France is bitter at this threat, and her bitterness is hardening her attitude to the more resolvable question of reparations and the Young Plan. Her contention is that Germany has used the money, lent to her since the War, to pay her reparations bills and to rebuild her factories. The French, therefore, at present are refusing to regard the short-term credits as a matter which can be considered to be part of the reparations issue.

According to a report from Berlin, a proposal in this emergency will be made to the Committee of Foreign Creditors by the Committee of German Debtors that prompt negotiations shall be started to find a new agreement. Since an agreement of some sort before February 29th is a bald necessity, we may assume that it will be found. Indeed, no great difficulty ought to be met in view of the fact that now French insistence on the divorce of the short-term credits issue from reparations need not be challenged. The news of the Franco-German entente in the matter of the Note to Basel has been received with great delight in the United States, whose two short-term loans to Germany amount to some 600,000,000 dollars. A general feeling, moreover, exists that, if a revision of reparations can be accomplished harmoniously, the United States Government will consent more readily to a general reduction of War debts. It would be rash, however, to indulge a too confident hope. Yesterday, in the Chamber, M. Laval denied with some heat that he would entertain any proposal to alter the Young Plan. The pronouncements of Prime Ministers, of course, are subject always to modifications as internal or external pressure may dictate; but at the moment no such pressure is being exercised. Signs are not wanting, however, that the French, with their dependents, soon may find themselves in a small minority, when the other nations begin to insist that Germany's future solvency must be a vital ingredient of Europe's welfare. Conspicuously, she cannot prosper while the Young Plan survives.

Dublin's Milk Supply.

Dublin on no account must be allowed to repeat the experience of Belfast. Yesterday, at a meeting of milk-producers from various parts of Leinster, Mr. C. M. Byrne, Chairman of the Wicklow County Council, hinted at the possibility of an imminent "milk war" in Dublin. The points at issue are almost precisely those which caused distress in Belfast a few weeks ago. According to Mr. Byrne's figures, farmers are receiving an utterly inadequate price for their supplies of milk to the retailing interests. They sell their milk at 10½d. a gallon, but, having passed through the retailers' hands, it costs the public 2s. 4d. a gallon. It is true that the retailers must bear the cost of sterilisation, bottling and delivery. Nevertheless, when all allowance has been made for these charges, a difference of 1s. 5½d. a gallon between the wholesale and the retail price of milk seems to be excessive; and the farmers not unnaturally desire that a proportion of the evident profit shall be passed on to them. Whoever obtains the profit, the people of Dublin manifestly do the paying, so that they have a right to understand the details of this dispute. The farmers have elected to show their hand, and for that reason, if for no other, popular favour will incline to their side. It remains for the retailers either to disprove the charges of excessive profit made against them or to remedy the farmers' grievance. Dublin will benefit by an airing of all the conditions that govern its milk supply, and we suggest that, if the contending interests are not willing to submit their dispute to dispassionate arbitration, it shall be made a subject of investigation by the Free State Government. Official intervention in Belfast occurred only just in time to prevent the complete disorganisation of the city's milk supply; as it was, the temporary stoppage had caused not merely inconvenience, but in many cases positive suffering. In Dublin the dispute must not be permitted to reach so advanced a stage. Milk is a vital commodity, and its supply ought to be subject to no fluctuations save those which are beyond human control. A "milk war" in Dublin would be fraught with even greater danger than the stoppage in Belfast; for the retail system in the North is more highly centralised. The producers have expressed their willingness, in Mr. Byrne's words, "to have the position remedied by peaceful means"; and we trust that the other party will come into the open with a frank and documented statement of its case. Otherwise a duty devolves upon either the Free State Government or some other responsible authority to ensure that the quarrel shall not reach such a stage as to cause distress among the children of Dublin.

Free State Fisheries.

The Irish Free State is bounded on three sides by waters which teem with fish; and fish are among the most nutritive of foods. Nevertheless, the State's citizens consume only 4½lb. of fish per mouth per annum, as compared with Great Britain's ration of 32lb. Furthermore, a considerable part of their supplies is imported—fresh fish to the annual amount of £180,000, and cured and tinned fish to the amount of £160,000. The new Sea Fisheries' Association, which held its first ordinary meeting in Dublin yesterday, proposes to remedy this anomalous and discreditable state of things. It intends to reorganise supply, in the confident hope that large and consistent supplies will stimulate a natural and abundant demand. In recent years the Free State's fishermen have been economic Ishmaels. Their boats and gear are, for the most part, obsolete and decayed. They have no sure markets or organised methods of transport. Often big catches go wholly to waste, and nearly always, for lack of proper selling agencies, their financial takings are a miserably slight percentage of the charge to the consumer. On the one hand, Irish fishermen starve beside their seas' potential wealth; on the other, fish is a rarity in inland areas, and some considerable towns do not possess a single fish-shop. The Association has made a good start. Already it has enrolled 650 members, and is making provision for the supply of new boats and engines. Under its scheme for the improvement of marketing facilities the Free State will be divided into thirteen areas of distribution; fresh fish will be brought to everybody's door; the fisherman will get a fair percentage of the profits and will be assured of a decent livelihood. The Association, which hopes that its plans will be operative in the new year, has come just in time to save an almost moribund industry. We heartily wish "more power to its elbow." In England to-day the fishing industry clamours for protection; and the success of its campaign may involve a wholesale dumping of foreign-caught fish in Irish ports. Against such invasion the only legitimate defence will be a cheap and regular supply from native sources.

The African Air Mail.

A despatch will leave Croydon Aerodrome at noon on the 20th January to mark the inauguration of the new air mail service between England and Cape Town. Five days later another machine will leave Cape Town, arriving at London on the 5th February. The whole journey in either direction will occupy eleven days, and in its course the mails will be carried in five different types of aeroplanes. Cairo will be reached on the outward journey by way of Paris, Brindisi, Athens and Alexandria, and subsequent stages will be Wady Halfa, Khartum, Juba, Nairobi, Mbeya, Salisbury and Johannesburg. The total distance to be flown through Africa, according to the Aeronautical Correspondent of The Times, is nearly six thousand miles, and most of the stages represent distances of six hundred miles, though three of them represent 825 miles apiece. After a trial period with mails only, passengers will be carried. At present the length of Africa from north to south can be traversed only by a variety of means of transport, and at a much slower rate than will be possible by this continuous service. The existing service between England and Africa ends on the Great Lakes, and passengers and mails alike must continue their progress to the Cape by land. An all-air service will confer incalculable benefit on South African and English commerce. Perhaps, as the passengers soar over the darkest areas of the dark continent, they will recall those pioneers of aviation whose lone enterprise has forged this link of Empire.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—I have been a subscriber to a general hospital for some years, and I would like to understand how I am situated in respect of the money coming in from the sweepstakes. So far as I remember, some years ago it was considered that there were too many hospitals in Dublin, and that they should be united into one large hospital. It was considered that this would cost £300,000, and at that time the money was not forthcoming. I see now that the Dublin hospitals will have received between £800,000 and £900,000 from the sweepstakes. What has happened to the scheme of amalgamation? Are the hospitals going to spend this money, multiplying their equipment in all these hospitals? If this is considered uneconomic and is still being done, what is the use of subscribing?—Yours, etc., "SUBSCRIBER."

GREEK PREMIER'S SUGGESTION.

SATISFYING CYPRIOTE ASPIRATIONS.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

ATHENS, Thursday.

THE retention by Great Britain of only part of Cyprus is suggested by M. Venizelos, the Greek Prime Minister, as a possible future solution of the Cypriote problem, in a speech to the Chamber of Deputies.

"If Great Britain should decide that the occupation of Cyprus is no longer necessary to her," the Prime Minister said, "or the occupation of only a part of the island would suffice for her interests, then, perhaps, she may be able to satisfy the national aspirations of the Cypriote; but always on condition that the attitude of the population is absolutely loyal, so that it could not be thought that Great Britain had yielded to pressure.

"Happily, the feelings of the Greek people towards Great Britain have been sincere for a whole century, and the whole race looks upon Great Britain as a protectress and precious friend." Fortunately, also, the authorities had prevented street demonstrations, which could only have had bad results.

BRITISH PROTEST.

M. Venizelos declared that he felt it his duty to inform the House that the British Minister in Athens had told him that the British Foreign Secretary would have formulated a vigorous protest against the "calumnies" of the Athenian Press regarding the British army and police in Cyprus, if the Greek Government had not taken its already well-known attitude in the matter.

The national desire that the Cypriotes should share in the Greek ideal should be kept within strictly legal limits. Some organs of the Greek Press had committed two grave faults. They had not disapproved the excesses of the Cypriotes, such as the burning of Government House, and they had stigmatised as oppressive the measures which the British Government had been compelled to take.

At the remark of M. Zavitsano, one of the leaders of the Opposition, that the question of Cyprus still remained open, M. Venizelos replied: "If Great Britain says that it is closed, I will say so, too; but I believe that it is not closed yet."

BELGIUM AND THE ANTI-DUMPING BILL.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

BRUSSELS, Thursday.

M. Heyman, Belgian Minister of industry, stated, during a debate in the Chamber of Deputies to-day on the economic crisis, that he hoped the British Government would use moderation in checking the import of Belgian merchandise, and that they would take into account the extremely liberal treatment of British products exported to Belgium.

There were few countries where the market was so open to them. Moreover, the British Government would surely not forget the recent efforts of Belgium to second British action with a view to lowering customs tariffs.

A sentence of seven years penal servitude was passed at Stafford Assizes yesterday on Austin Hollingshead (21), bricklayer, who was charged with the attempted murder of Nellie Locker (23), his former sweetheart, at Tunstall. He pleaded guilty to wounding with intent to do grievous bodily harm.

LONDON LETTER.

BRITISH BROADCASTING PROGRAMMES.

59 FLEET STREET, LONDON,

THURSDAY NIGHT.

In the House of Commons this afternoon the Prime Minister, in answer to a question by Mr. Lansbury, leader of the Opposition, said that it was not intended to prolong the sittings of Parliament beyond the date originally fixed, and thus it may be expected to rise on Friday of next week. The Prime Minister explained that the Government had important administrative matters to discuss.

A demand was made by Mr. Lansbury and some Conservative members that there should be a discussion on broadcasting next week, including the appointment of the members of the Broadcasting Corporation, but on this point Mr. Macdonald would not give way. Parliament has no control over the directors of the Corporation, and in the circumstances a discussion would be useless. There is an almost general feeling among people, I believe, that the programmes of the Corporation are designedly arranged more with the idea of moral uplift than of pleasure and amusement. Another assertion is that the programmes are arranged specifically for the few, and not for the many.

The Statute of Westminster.

The Statute of Westminster Bill will be taken in the House of Commons to-morrow, and the debate promises to be interesting. Mr. Thomas, the Dominions Secretary, will make the opening statement, but the speech of the afternoon is likely to be made by Mr. Churchill, who is known to hold strong views on some of the points in the bill. Several other Conservative members intend to intervene in the debate. It is expected that the debate will close about four o'clock, but arrangements have been made for the Speaker to remain in the chair until the Royal Assent to the Abnormal Importations Bill has been given in the House of Lords. The Statute of Westminster Bill will be resumed in the House of Commons next Monday.

Conservative Energy.

The new Parliament is becoming interesting; for it is already apparent that the majority in the House of Commons intends that things shall be done regardless of the views of its leaders. The Conservatives have no undue modesty in voicing their opinions and do not hesitate to make demands. There is, in fact, a possibility that they may proceed too quickly. The Government's haste to fall in with the views of the majority on the question of dumping has merely whetted its appetite for more drastic measures. The protection of agriculture, the abolition of the land valuation proposals, and the repeal of the vexatious "Dora" regulations will be pressed with a keenness that the Government will find it difficult to resist. The majority of new members are anxious to carry out promises made to their constituents, and do not hesitate to say so, pointing out that the Government has a majority great enough to pass any measure into law. The Prime Minister has a very big team to drive, and, unless great care is taken, it may become unmanageable.

Help for Agriculture.

The attitude assumed by the Government's supporters is not without its effect in the country, and members are receiving numbers of letters and telegrams urging them to persevere. This is particularly the case in relation to agriculture. Farmers point out that they want to make plans for the winter, and that immediate legislation is necessary if they are to be saved. It is understood that the pressure has not been without its effect on the Government, and that plans are being prepared to secure a measure of protection for the farmer; but the question is so wide and intricate that nothing can be done in a hurry lest an irretrievable mistake should be made. Finance enters very largely into any scheme designed to help the agricultural industry, and it is not a simple matter to find the required millions.

The Price of the Pound.

Financial circles are gratified that the pound is maintaining its value abroad at a period in the year when the normal trend is to a lower standard. There can be little doubt that the depreciation in our currency is having the natural effect of discouraging imports and increasing exports, so that an additional element of strength has been given to the exchange position. The benefits, however, will diminish as other currencies come into line with sterling, but, if import duties are imposed, the exchange will be further strengthened. In the early part of the new year the seasonal pressure on sterling will begin to decline, but not for some considerable time will it be possible for the pound to find its natural level. Possibly a number of new factors will be introduced into the situation if tariffs come into operation.

Dumped Goods.

Next Monday ought to see the beginning of a new era in Britain's trade developments, since a number of duties on dumped foreign goods will come into operation. It is expected that the Orders will number about a dozen, covering a wide range of goods. It is understood that decisions concerning the issue of Orders will rest with the President of the Board of Trade personally, though they will not be made until the Chancellor of the Exchequer has been consulted. The Orders do not require immediate sanction by Parliament, but must be approved by the House of Commons within twenty-eight parliamentary days after issue. The Board of Trade and the Customs will work together in the watch on excessive imports. The warehouses at the docks, however, are packed with foreign goods which have passed safely through the Customs, and I am told that enough hosiery has been imported of late to last the country twelve months.

Japan and the League.

If the League of Nations fails in its efforts to bring about a solution of the difficulties in Manchuria, it will not be surprising if a new situation develops in regard to the League's activities, involving the possibility of withdrawals among its members. The Japanese troops have persevered with their objective and have driven the Chinese armies into flight. This means that Japan has attained her object, in spite of all the protests made by the League, and at a moment when her representative was arguing her case in Paris. In diplomatic circles to-day it was suggested that the League virtually has failed to prove its usefulness, and its action in the future—particularly in regard to Manchuria—will be watched with curiosity.

British Coal for Finland.

Negotiations for the supply of British coal to Finland are taking place, and it is likely that the Finnish market will be open to coal from the North of England mines in the near future. It is proposed that the Government of Finland shall purchase British instead of continental coal, and that in return an order for pit props for use in British coal mines shall be placed in Finland. If the Finnish market is opened, it will do something to counteract the effect of the recent French restrictions on coal imports. These now are limited to 75 per cent. of the average quantity imported in the last three years.

JAPAN'S CHALLENGE TO THE LEAGUE.

NO EVACUATION BEFORE TREATY GRANTING ALL DEMANDS.

COUNCIL FACED WITH A CRISIS.

CHINESE PRESIDENT LEAVES FOR MANCHURIA.

A NOTE from Japan handed to the President of the League of Nations Council last night has completely altered the outlook for a settlement of the Sino-Japanese dispute over Manchuria, and when the Council meets to-day it will find itself confronted with a situation which would appear to offer absolutely no exit.

Japan declares, it is understood in well-informed quarters, that she will not evacuate Manchuria until a new treaty has been negotiated directly with China to confirm present treaties and the fundamental points.

General Chiang Kai-Shek, President of the Chinese Government, announces that he is himself going at once to Manchuria.

The President's journey may portend the organisation of a more serious resistance in Manchuria, or it may be the prelude to peace negotiations.

The Chinese delegate to the League Council, in a Note to the Council yesterday morning, was forthright in bringing forward five points as opposed to the Japanese fundamentals. Although Dr. Sze refers pointedly to the Articles of the League Covenant that permit economic and stronger measures to be taken against an aggressor nation, he has not yet called upon the Council to take action under those provisions.

PEACEFUL MEASURES EXHAUSTED.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

PARIS, Thursday.

SUCH slender hopes of a settlement as had been raised by the Japanese suggestion of an international commission of inquiry has been rudely dispelled by the Note which was handed this evening to M. Briand by the Japanese Ambassador.

Although its contents have not yet been officially divulged, it is understood that Japan declares that she will not evacuate Manchuria until a new treaty has been negotiated directly with China to confirm present treaties and the fundamental points which were enumerated in a recent Note to M. Briand.

Even, the Note adds, should the security of property and of Japanese nationals in Manchuria seem to be assured, Japan will maintain her military occupation, because she feels that the Nanking Government, as a tool of the Kuomintang—an essentially anti-Japanese organism—is powerless to ensure order in the occupied territory.

NO FAITH IN CHINA.

The Japanese Government, it is added, is not in a position to accept the declarations of Dr. Sze, the Chinese representative, regarding the respect of treaties, because it does not consider that these declarations contain any guarantee such as is required by Japan.

Nor can the Japanese Government admit the proposals which have been put forward by certain distinguished members of the Council regarding the adoption of a programme for the Sino-Japanese negotiations which should coincide with Japanese evacuation.

The Japanese delegation cannot accept any arrangement on this basis, although such a proposal was put forward by the Japanese delegation itself last October.

It seems obvious that all channels of a settlement under Article 11 will have been exhausted, and it will only be possible to consider whether there is a possibility of some progress under Article 15, which gives greater scope to the initiative of the Council.

WILL COUNCIL ACT?

Unfortunately, Article 15 virtually entails exercise of the sanctions under Article 16, and it is, therefore, doubtful whether the members of the Council will be prepared to envisage this responsibility.

When the Council meets to-morrow it will find itself confronted with a situation which would appear to offer absolutely no exit.

The great advantage of the Commission of Inquiry proposal was that it would have circumvented the five fundamental points for the time being, because, in spite of all the wearisome discussion and exchange of Notes, not a soul is yet clear as to what the Japanese demands really imply. The written explanation, with which Mr. Yoshizawa has promised to furnish the Council, may prove more explicit, but at the moment the members of the Council are groping in a fog.

CHINESE QUESTIONS.

The five points brought forward by Dr. Sze, in his turn, are:—

(1) Does the Covenant of the League possess any valid force, and should not the League, by virtue of Articles 15 and 16, check effectively the acts of Japan?

(2) Is the Treaty for the Renunciation of War valid at all, and may Japan use force to prosecute her national policy of aggression?

(3) Is the Nine-Powers' Treaty still valid, and should not concerted action be taken to remedy the situation?

(4) Is Japan permitted to abuse her concession at Tientsin by making it a base of operations against Chinese safety?

(5) Does not Japan's seizure of the salt revenue constitute a direct impairment of the financial system of the Chinese Government?

CHIANG AND HIS DUTY.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

NANKING, Thursday.

It was at a secret session of the fourth National Kuomintang Congress this afternoon that the President, speaking with emotion, said that he must fulfil his duties and obligations, and prove his loyalty to the country and to the Kuomintang, by going immediately to North China; whereupon the deelgates rose as one man and remained standing in silence as a tribute to the President.

It is understood that an important resolution will be submitted by the Foreign Affairs Commission at to-morrow's session of the Congress.

It is noteworthy that the President this afternoon expressed the sincere hope that the Congress would accept as many as possible of the names proposed by the Canton group in electing members to the Central Executive and Central Control Committees of the Kuomintang. In conjunction with President Chiang's decision to proceed immediately to North China, it is felt in interested quarters that the forthcoming elections are likely to result in the Canton group returning to power.

Fifteen thousand male and female students to-day paraded the streets of Shanghai (telegraphs The Times Correspondent), and sold flags on behalf of a fund for General Ma Chang-shan. The offices of a national "Salvation Army" were opened throughout the city for the enrolment of recruits. Six thousand student labourers were enrolled. The Government will provide a few rifles, but no ammunition.

The existing tension has been aggravated by the sight of Japanese marines patrolling the streets and roughly handling Chinese.

The Japanese cotton mills, which possess only two weeks' raw material, are facing an enforced closure, which will affect 300,000 workers and their dependents.

THE MANCHURIAN BATTLEFIELD.

JAPANESE "PUPPET GOVERNMENT" FORMED.

According to a wireless message received in Peking at 7.25 last night, fighting is still raging in Tritsihar, and General Ma is directing operations from new headquarters thirty miles north of the town.

News from other sources, which there seems to be every reason to credit, states not only that General Ma has fled, but that the city is completely in Japanese hands.

The main body of the Japanese entered the city at ten o'clock yesterday morning, and Chang Chi-Hui, Governor of the Harbin district, has declared the independence of Heliungkiang Province, and proclaimed himself Governor.

SOVIET WARNED.

It is reported that there were about three hundred Japanese casualties, and between three and four thousand Chinese casualties.

The Japanese Government has instructed its Ambassador in Moscow to convey a friendly warning to M. Litvinoff the Soviet Foreign Commissar, as to the danger of serious complications arising if the Soviet Union should send troops into Northern Manchuria.

The mystery of the whereabouts of Pu Yi, or Hsuan Tung, the young Chinese ex-Emperor, who was reported to have gone to Manchuria for a restoration of the Manchu dynasty, appears to be cleared up by Japanese official dispatches reporting that he is at present at Tankantzu, a hot-spring resort midway between Liaoyang and Newchwang (Manchuria).

IRISH JUMPING TEAM IN TORONTO.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

British and Irish teams took third and fourth place respectively in the international riding events which opened the Royal Winter Fair and Horse Show to-day.

United States Army teams took the first two places. The two Canadian teams were unplaced.

THE RE-GRADING OF STATION-MASTERS.

BY OUR LABOUR CORRESPONDENT.

A short time ago the Great Southern Railways Company served notice on fifty-one station-masters employed on their system that it was their intention to reduce their grade owing to the reduction on their respective stations.

The reduction in grade carried a decrease in salary of from £30 to £90 per annum. It was stated that the new system would come into operation as from December 1st next.

The Railway Clerks' Association, I understand, immediately took up the matter with the company, and challenged their right to act, as they stated, "in this arbitrary fashion," and quoted in support of their contention the Railways Act and the negotiating machinery as far as the question of wages was concerned.

As a result of the representations of the Union the company have withdrawn their notices.

"AN PHOBLACHT."

It was stated yesterday by the management of An Phoblacht that, for the time being, they had decided to suspend publication of the paper.

The residence of Captain Martin, at Butterfield lane, Rathfarnham, was entered by burglars last night and some jewellery was taken. It is assumed that the burglars gained an entrance through a window. The Civic Guards are investigating the affair.

LINER ON FIRE AT BELFAST.

BURNING FROM STEM TO STERN.

EXPLOSIONS HAMPER FIREMEN.

SECOND OUTBREAK THIS YEAR.

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

BELFAST, Friday Morning.

FIRE broke out at 9.30 last night aboard the motor luxury liner, Bermuda, of 19,000 tons, at present lying in Messrs. Workman and Clark's Yard, Belfast, undergoing repairs for damage caused at Hamilton, Bermuda, in June last, when the vessel was gutted by fire.

When the Brigade arrived the ship was well alight, and it was evident that they would have a most difficult job, as owing to her position in dock it would be virtually impossible to get a full force of water.

The flames progressed rapidly, and two explosions took place within the interior of the vessel, which shook all buildings for a considerable distance around.

The noise of the explosions was heard within a radius of from three to four miles, while the flames were visible for many miles around.

All Belfast Lough was lit up.

Three of the firemen were overcome by the fumes and taken away in an ambulance. One of them, Fireman O'Gorman, was taken to hospital and the other two to brigade headquarters. The three returned later, having recovered from the effects of the fumes.

The whole of the Belfast Brigade were engaged upon the task. By midnight the vessel was ablaze from stem to stern.

At one o'clock the Bermuda was burning more fiercely than ever, and a series of explosions hampered the firemen. Nothing is known yet of the origin of the outbreak.

THE FIRE AT BERMUDA.

The Bermuda was built by Messrs. Workman, Clark and Co., Ltd., at Belfast, for the Furness-Bermuda Line of Messrs. Furness, Withy and Co., Ltd. She was designed for trips between New York and Bermuda during the season, and for world cruises at other times. She made her maiden voyage in 1928. While lying at Hamilton Wharf, Bermuda, she was seriously damaged by fire, which broke out early in the morning of June 17. The ship was partly submerged to prevent the fire reaching her oil tanks.

The court of inquiry found that two or three fires broke out simultaneously in the Bermuda, but that there was no evidence of incendiarism.

Temporary repairs were effected at Bermuda, and the liner proceeded under her own power to Belfast, which she reached on July 14, and then went into dry dock at Messrs. Workman, Clark and Co.'s yard.

FEARED TOTAL LOSS.

TWO MEN CLIMB BLAZING CRANE.

At 2.30 this morning the fire was still blazing, and the vessel appeared to be doomed. The plates on her sides were red-hot and bulging outwards.

Earlier in the evening an act of great bravery was performed by Electrician George Clark and Fireman Thompson.

An electric crane, 175 feet high, on the adjoining jetty caught fire, and its removal from the position was necessary. The two men climbed the hot iron ladder to the blazing cabin, and, while firemen directed jets of water on it, entered and switched on the current, enabling the crane to be moved.

TASMANIA AND EMPIRE LINK.

STATUTE OF WESTMINSTER CONDEMNED.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

HOBART, Thursday.

A resolution introduced by the Government protesting against the passing of the Statute of Westminster, which was ratified by the Commonwealth Parliament at the end of July, was agreed to by both Houses of the Tasmanian Parliament to-day.

In the course of an exhaustive review, the Attorney-General (Mr. H. S. Baker) said that the chief objection to the Statute, which gives legal effect to the agreements respecting Dominion status reached at the Imperial Conferences of 1926 and 1930, was that it broke the link which had so long existed between the separate States and the mother country.

The States, he continued, were being asked to leave their destinies at the whim of the Commonwealth, when the citizens were entitled to preserve such relations as they wished with Great Britain.

MILK WAR THREAT.

"IF JUSTICE IS DENIED US."

PRODUCERS' DEMAND FOR BETTER PRICE.

"MILK-PRODUCERS want to have the position remedied by peaceful means, and do not want trouble; but if justice is denied them, they will have no hesitation in achieving it by other legitimate means."

This declaration was made by the Chairman at a meeting of milk-producers from various parts of Leinster, held under the chairmanship of Mr. C. M. Byrne, Chairman of the Wicklow County Council, in the C.Y.M.S. Hall, Aughrim street, Dublin, yesterday.

The object of the meeting was to show to the public the merit of the producers' claim to a better price for their milk—at present 10½d. per gallon in Dublin as compared with 2s. 4d. retail—and after strong protest against the price discrepancy as shown by these figures had been expressed by several of the delegates, the meeting went into private session.

In the course of his address from the chair, Mr. Byrne said that milk-producers were suffering a great injustice. They were paid only 10½d. per gallon, while the retail price in Dublin was about 2s. 4d. It was "an extraordinary position that it cost 1s. 5½d. to bring the milk 30 or 40 miles to Dublin.

"The retailers say that they can get milk cheaper from the creameries, but," said Mr. Byrne, "producers say that there is no comparison between the creamery milk and the milk the producers supply. The people of Dublin are entitled to the best milk, and if they are getting creamery milk, they are not getting the milk for which they are paying."

The Irish butter trade, the Chairman went on, was unable to get the same price as other countries, because Irishmen were unable to supply butter during winter. It was extraordinary that creameries losing this trade could compete with the farmers who produced milk. (Cries of "Shame.")

Farmers would not tolerate that, and if there was necessity to take drastic action—he hoped not—he hoped that they would have the support of farmers, and not allow creameries to carry on like that.

"We want only justice, and we are going to see that we get it," said Mr. Byrne, amid applause.

HIGH COST OF PRODUCTION.

Mr. J. P. O'Donnell, M.C.C., Wicklow Farmers' Association, said that in County Wicklow the price of milk to the producer had been steadily reduced in the last few years. In 1926 it was 1s. 4d.; in 1927 1s. 1d.; in 1928, '29 and '30 1s., and in 1931 10½d. The retailer states that he could get it from the creameries at a much lower price. Creamery milk, however, was always mixed and, owing to the long distances of transit, of inferior quality.

The retailer got his milk delivered in Dublin at present for 11½d.; he charged the producer a penny off this for delivery. The retailer gave as his reason for that excessive margin the cost of pasteurising, bottling and delivery. That, however, did not account for the tremendous discrepancy to the consumer.

Mr. E. O'Sullivan, Secretary, County Wicklow Agricultural Society, who acted as Secretary to the meeting, said that when they took into account the cost of feeding and labour, the sale of milk at 10d. per gallon was not a paying business.

The Rev. J. W. Johnston (Newcastle, Co. Wicklow) said that they intended to deal with the matter in an honest way, and were not demanding anything unreasonable. The production of milk was costly. Dairy cows on the Dublin market to-day cost as much as at the peak periods during the War. Taking £15 as an estimate for the feeding of a cow during the winter months, and the cost of labour, depreciation, etc., it was shown that winter dairying did not pay. Surely they had a claim to a better price on that account?

Mr. Grimes (Dublin) said that, unless there was co-operation from all counties, their objective was impossible.

Mr. Byrne (Secretary, Meath and Louth Milk-producers' Association) said that in Louth and Meath producers were paid 1s. per gallon.

Mr. A. Prior (Killeshandra), writing on behalf of County Cavan Agricultural League, said that milk-producers would have the support of organised Co. Cavan farmers in their fight for justice.

The meeting then went into private session.

SUPPLIERS' DEMAND.

The meeting unanimously decided that their price for milk from 1st November, 1931, to 1st of May, 1932, would be 1s. 1d. a gallon clear to the producer.

The secretary and the delegates were instructed to communicate these terms to the various buyers, and be in a position to make a report to the next meeting, to be held on Thursday next.

It was further resolved that immediate steps be taken to extend the organisation to other counties.

IN THE DAIL.

THE FREE STATE SLUMS.

MR. MULCAHY AS ARCHITECT.

FATE OF A HOUSE BEAUTIFUL.

MR. BLYTHE'S HINT TO 'BUS-OWNERS.

BY OUR SPECIAL REPRESENTATIVE.

MR. MULCAHY, Minister for Local Government and Public Health, who, on the strength of his patient vigils on the Government Front Bench during the debates on his recent Road Traffic Bill, might be said to have qualified for the title of the "Stickit Minister," had another arduous day in the Dail yesterday, when the second stage of the Housing Bill, which aims at the abolition of slums throughout the country, was resumed.

In his introductory speech on Wednesday night, the Minister had given us a glimpse of this bill as a stately edifice, with every brick carefully laid, providing accommodation for all. Deputies on the opposite benches were then divided in their views; for, while Mr. O'Kelly seemed prepared to accept the new building more or less at its architect's valuation, especially as it appeared to stand on a good, solid Fianna Fail foundation, we had Mr. Lemass denouncing it as a ramshackle, jerry-built structure, and threatening to apply for a demolition order forthwith.

NICE, BUT INADEQUATE.

Yet another view was expressed by Mr. Corish, from the Labour benches, and this was the view that, with a surprising unanimity, was taken by deputies yesterday. They agreed that this was a nice house—this house that Mr. Mulcahy built—and nobody was going to attempt to knock it down, but unfortunately it was not nearly big enough to solve the Free State's housing problem and provide everybody with a decent home. City-dwellers would doubtless find accommodation, but what of their homeless country cousins?

So, while the Minister sat stolidly and imperturbably at his lonely post, diffident deputies from the Government benches, peremptory deputies from the Labour benches, and denunciatory deputies from the Fianna Fail benches rose in succession to urge that an extra wing should be added to the building for those neglected tenants.

THE ALEXANDRA GUILD.

To expect local authorities to provide houses under present conditions, it was suggested, was like asking them to make bricks without straw, or at least with an inadequate allowance of straw; but what could be done to remedy the situation?

It was inevitable that that El Dorado the sweepstake, should be suggested by someone, and the deputy from whom the suggestion actually emanated was Mr. Everett, a Labour member. Mr. Hugh Law, who contended that, bad as the Dublin slums were, they were not so bad as some in the rural areas, favoured the extension of voluntary effort on the lines of the Alexandra College Guild in Dublin.

The Minister's reply added nothing to what had been already said. He pointed out that the bill proposed to open the Local Loans Fund to rural authorities on the same terms as to urban authorities, but, as he could give no information as to what those terms would be, none of the deputies seemed particularly grateful for the information.

THE SPIRIT OF ECONOMY.

The House, however, passed the second stage of the bill without dissent, and also passed the second stage of the Finance Bill for the imposition of the additional petrol tax, despite a prophecy by Mr. Lemass that this would force a number of omnibuses off the road. Mr. Blythe's reply to this was a hint to 'bus-owners to overhaul those services which are now uneconomic.

SECOND DAY OF THE SWEEPSTAKE DRAW.

HOW £140,000 WAS GIVEN AWAY.

TWO IRISH TICKETS WHICH DREW £4,216 EACH.

THE draw in connection with the Irish Hospitals' Sweepstake on the Manchester November Handicap was continued yesterday, when the task was begun of drawing the counterfoils for the ten residual cash prizes of £4,216 each and 1,900 cash prizes of £100 each.

The draw was again carried out by nurses, under the supervision of General Eoin O'Duffy, Chief Commissioner of the Civic Guards. Mr. J. O'Sheehan, director, announced the results. He informed the large audience that, having drawn the residual cash prizes, they would draw 1,000 of the 1,900 cash prizes of £100 each, and that, on the following day, they would draw the balance of 900 cash prizes.

Ireland drew two of the residual prizes and nearly ninety of the smaller consolation prizes.

THE SCENE AT THE PLAZA.

IRISH NAMES APPLAUDED.

BY OUR SPECIAL REPRESENTATIVE.

PLAZA, Thursday.

The drum rolls on. The atmosphere remains tense. Admittedly, the possibilities of winning a fortune have been exhausted, but still there remain to be won 1,900 prizes of £100, and 10 prizes of over £4,000 each.

At 10 o'clock the hall is crowded, just as full as it was yesterday. Ten people will be £40,000 richer in as many minutes.

The drum revolves. It stops. Two nurses plunge in their hands, and two individuals are richer by £4,000 each. This is repeated five times, and Mr. O'Sheehan is handed ten counterfoils. He reads out the names—M. M. Lyons, of Limerick. A cheer goes up. Ireland starts with a lead. England follows, then Canada, then South Africa. Monica McGarry, of Larne, Ireland, leads. The crowd cheers.

But England wins. Out of the remaining five names England claims four, and America one. Ireland is defeated, but she put up a good fight.

Then came the £100 prizes. Name after name is called. Whenever Ireland wins the name is welcomed by a cheer.

Mr. O'Sheehan's voice never falters. I feel glad that his lot is not mine, for a terrible strain must be imposed on his voice. He bravely persists. To-day he will have called over 1,000 names. At 1 o'clock comes the lunch interval. The audience disperses, and the Press, who represent every people in the world, are entertained by the Sweep Committee. Their entertainment is worthy of the magnitude of the Sweep.

DUBLIN'S EXPORT.

News. That has been Dublin's chief export during the last two days.

Yesterday was the day of horses. It was the day of gambling; for the drawer of each horse found himself with between £600 and £30,000 at stake. He will not know which sum for the next ten days.

Money prizes are the order of to-day. One thousand telegrams have left Dublin by now, and each one is equivalent to a cheque from the Hospitals' Trust. It represents money that will be paid in a few days' time, and the certainty that the holder of each counterfoil drawn will have the best Christmas present of his life.

The draw for the £100 prizes is instinct with romance. The ownership of one of the tickets drawn may be the turning point in some individual's career. It may give the lucky holder a chance to improve his business. It may stave off the ill-effects of the crisis, and make possible a continuation of the struggle until times are better.

Dublin has realised this romance, and all day long an audience, hushed by excitement, has been awaiting the declaration of their names as winners.

All day long Mr. O'Sheehan, like some priest of the goddess of chance, has droned out the names of those whom fate has favoured.

To-night one thousand people will go to bed more happily than they did last night. The impossible has been realised. Dreams have come true.

To those who have so far been unsuccessful to-morrow offers a final chance. Will a nurse pull out my ticket? The future is inscrutable. That is the romance of the Sweep.

LARNE SCHOOLGIRL'S SUCCESS.

LUCKY TICKET WON IN ANOTHER BALLOT.

Miss Monica McGarry, of Roland street, Larne, the holder of the ticket B/D U 8452, which drew one of the ten £4,216 prizes, is an eleven-year-old schoolgirl. It is a case of compound luck. She sold a book of tickets for a ballot, and for doing so got a free ticket. This free ticket won one of the prizes in the ballot, which happened to be a ticket for the Dublin Hospitals' Sweepstake.

The girl was at school when the news arrived at her home, but the telegram was brought to her mother, who is employed as a machinist, and has to work hard to rear a family of small children. She was delighted at the good news, which will make a great difference to the living conditions of herself and family.

A LIMERICK WINNER.

Mrs. Margaret M. Lyons, who was successful in winning a prize of £4,216, is the wife of Mr. C. H. Lyons, grocer and spirit merchant, 44 Wickham street, Limerick. She first heard the good news when coming from Mass from a woman friend, who congratulated her on her luck.

During the day she was the recipient of hearty congratulations from numerous friends. Mrs. Lyons observed that she could easily find ways of disposing of some of her good fortune, but added that she was not yet certain which of her tickets was successful. In one ticket there were nine shares.

FROM "THE TIMES."

(BY SPECIAL ARRANGEMENT.)

EQUALITY OF STATUS.

In a leading article The Times to-day states:—Most Englishmen, who are not lawyers, will find it very difficult to feel either enthusiastic or apprehensive about the Statute of Westminster, to which the House of Commons is to be asked to give a second reading to-day. For many years past they have been accustomed to regard the Dominions not as Dependencies, but as partners in the Empire. This equality of status was specifically set out in the Balfour Declaration, unanimously adopted by the Imperial Conference of 1926, which, indeed, did no more than define an existing situation. Nor was that equality affected by the fact that in the Colonial Laws Validity Act, in the Mercantile Marine Act and in one or two other matters there still survived traces of the old legal supremacy of what used to be called the Imperial Parliament.

These survivals did no one any harm, and the Merchant Shipping Act, in particular, even if it was an anomaly, had the advantage that it provided a uniform shipping law for the whole Empire, to the benefit of the Dominions as well as of Great Britain.

THE NEW UNITY.

If there is no enthusiasm for the Statute, adds The Times, there is, and there need be, no apprehension as to the practical effect of such a document on the unity of the Empire. The old unity, based on the supremacy of the Government and Parliament in Great Britain, is already a thing of the past. The new unity towards which the Empire is striving, is a unity based on free and equal co-operation. Such co-operation will be made not more difficult, but easier, by clearing away the last vestiges of inequality. It is of good omen that the passing of the Statute, burying the old conception of a supreme Imperial Parliament and dependent Dominions, will be followed almost immediately by an Imperial Economic Conference, at which, with every prospect of success, an endeavour will be made to give concrete effect to the new conception of an economic unity, based on the free co-operation of equal partners, united, as it is put in the preamble of the Statute, by a common allegiance to the Crown, which more than ever becomes, again quoting from the preamble, "the symbol of the free association of the members of the British Commonwealth of Nations."

It is true that henceforth the Dominion Governments and Parliaments will have the legal right to do as they like, without any control from the Government of or Parliament of Great Britain, and that some of the things they might conceivably choose to do might be injurious to themselves or to the rest of the Empire; but there is nothing in the Statute which will make them less likely than at present to act reasonably and sensibly; and, if they should desire to act foolishly or maliciously, there is nothing in the legal rights now about to be discarded which would enable the British Government and Parliament to restrain them. Indeed, the formal abolition of the legal right to exercise restraint is more likely to lead to self-restraint than to inconsiderate action.

HOUSING BILL MAKES PROGRESS.

INCREASED PETROL TAX AND THE 'BUSES.

HEAVY LOSSES IN REVENUE PROPHESIED.

THE second reading of the Housing (Miscellaneous Provisions) Bill, 1931, occupied much of the time of the Dail yesterday. The chief ground of complaint by the Opposition was that, while it would do much to relieve conditions in the cities, it did little for the rural areas, where housing was of the most wretched description. The second reading was agreed to without a division.

The second stage of the Finance (Customs Duties) No. 4 Bill, which increases the tax on petrol, was passed by 74 votes to 41. It was suggested by the Opposition that the new impost was equivalent to a tax of £150 per 'bus per year, that it would reduce the number of 'buses on the road, and that the Exchequer would lose heavily.

RURAL HOUSING CONDITIONS.

Dr. WARD (F.F., Monaghan) said that in so far as the bill aimed at dealing with slum conditions and insanitary areas in the cities and towns it deserved sympathetic consideration. The real problem, to his mind—the problem of rural housing—was of a magnitude greater even than that of the slums, and was more urgently in need of solution. The housing conditions of many of the smaller farmers were the most wretched conditions under which human beings could be asked to live.

The Minister had given no indication of how he proposed to deal with the housing conditions of the small farmers and uneconomic holders in the State. There was a housing problem in every county akin to the Gaeltacht problem. If the bogey of Communism, of which they heard so much, ever became a reality in this country, more especially in rural Ireland, it would be because of the inhuman conditions in which they asked the people to live, and made no effort to remedy.

PHILANTHROPIC BODIES.

Mr. HUGH LAW (Government, Donegal) said that since 1914 there had been for all practical purposes a complete cessation of building under the Labourers Acts. He asked the Minister was it intended to stimulate local authorities to enter upon active work in building labourers' cottages where it was necessary, and if the funds provided would be adequate for the purpose. This was the first serious attempt that had been made in a direct way to solve the problem, and for that reason the bill deserved support.

In the matter of nursing for the people by voluntary and philanthropic bodies, the Minister had stressed with great force the desirability of enlisting the services of individual philanthropic, charitable and kindly people. He did not know whether the Minister would agree that these remarks would also apply to housing. Would it be the policy of the Government, as he hoped it would, to seek the help of such bodies of people in connection with housing? Such bodies could be of great use in what he considered was a necessary part of their work of dealing with the slum problem, especially in Dublin. He referred especially to the reconditioning of old houses.

He spoke of the work done by such bodies in this country as the Alexandra Guild Tenement Company, and said much could be done to help towards a solution by such associations, not only in the intial work of reconditioning and remodelling individual houses, but also in taking a human interest in their inhabitants.

Major WOLFE (Govt., Kildare) said that he thought that the bill was an honest attempt to deal with a long-standing problem. Going round the slum area in Dublin and elsewhere he believed that more could be done by reconstructing those old houses and adding two or three storeys to them. This would give more accommodation than new houses. There were various buildings throughout the country that could be converted into suitable dwellings with some alteration.

SWEEPSTAKE SUGGESTION.

Mr. EVERETT (Labour, Wicklow) said that the bill had failed to deal with the housing problem in the rural areas. He suggested that they should run a sweepstake to provide money for such work.

Mr. F. AIKEN (F.F., Louth) said that if Deputy Good went into the matter of wages paid to workmen and profit for employers he would find that it had less influence on the purchase of houses than an increase in the bank rate.

Deputy GOOD said that of every £ spent on houses 15s. 6d. went in wages.

Mr. AIKEN said that what the people wanted were long-term loans with repayment at low rates of interest. Irish people's money invested in English banks was being gambled away on the Stock Exchange, and was not being profitably employed in this country.

WORRYING A MINISTER.

Mr. SHEEHY (Govt., Cork West) said that the only thing with which Deputy O'Kelly was concerned was the general election, not with anxiety for improving the slums of Dublin. It was deplorable that that when a Minister introduced a bill for the betterment of the people he was put on the pillory and charged with neglect.

Mr. FAHY (F.F., Galway) said that any solution which the Minister had, no matter how costly, would have the support of the House. Fianna Fail were supporting the bill because it was better than nothing.

Mr. REYNOLDS (Govt., Leitrim-Sligo) asked the Minister if he would give facilities by way of grants for the improvement of existing bad houses owned by small farmers.

A HOUSING POLICY.

Mr. O'CONNELL (Lab., Sligo) expressed disappointment with the speech of President Cosgrave on the previous evening. The President, he said, was an authority on housing, particularly in Dublin. There was no settled policy with regard to housing. He said there ought to be some attempt to solve this housing problem over a period of years, so that those in the building industry would know what was before them and make plans accordingly. This would also help to ease the unemployment problem, and result not only in producing more houses, but would enable them to be built at a much cheaper cost that at present.

He was surprised that in regard to derelict sites the bill proposed to pay compensation. His view was that not only should the owners not be compensated, but they should be punished, because these sites were a menace to the public health and to morality wherever they existed. He regretted that the Minister when taking steps under this bill to deal with the slum problem in the city had at the same time proposed to curtail the facilities with regard to housing in the rural districts. He strongly appealed to the Minister to retain the facilities that existed up to April last, which enabled residents in these districts to obtain a direct subsidy.

Mr. DOYLE (Lab., Carlow-Kilkenny) urged the use of Irish materials in the building of cottages in order to keep the money at home and provide employment in granite and slate quarries. There was nothing in the bill to encourage the private builder, but he would support it because it was an attempt to solve the problem.

APARTMENT HOUSES.

APPORTIONING THE COST.

The MINISTER FOR LOCAL GOVERNMENT said that if there was discontent among the classes for whom the bill was framed it would mean that they would be forced to exert themselves. Deputies had tried to make out that the problem was a national one, and Deputy O'Kelly had said that a Government was set up to overcome difficulties. Deputies, if they followed that belief, were going to be disillusioned. The setting up of a Government by the electorate did not mean that they had been relieved of all the effects of original sin.

The Minister pointed out that twenty-four local authorities in the country were making a small income from houses for the working classes under their control. In the course of the discussion it had been made clear to him that certain deputies wanted housing in, say, Leitrim and Roscommon and Galway, to be brought to the standard of, say, Wexford, and if that were done then they would find Wexford demanding that their standard should be raised. In Roscommon and Mayo seventy per cent. of the people lived in three-roomed houses, whereas in Co. Wexford eighteen per cent. lived in three-roomed houses.

In dealing with insanitary areas in Dublin, Cork and Galway, it would be necessary, said the Minister, to erect apartment houses, and their experience in recent years has been that apartment houses cost more than single houses standing on their own site. They considered that the limit to which any local authority could go in building apartment houses was £450 each. Of this, thirty-six per cent. would be borne by the local authority, thirty-six per cent. to be borne by the State, and twenty-eight per cent. by the occupier.

They intended to stand over the development of the attack on the housing problem in urban and rural areas in the same close way, and with no less attention than had been done in Dublin.

LABOURERS' COTTAGES.

In the case of labourers' cottages, he realised that in many parts of the country they could not be built under existing conditions by local authorities who were anxious to build. Hitherto they were given a grant of £50 by the authorities and to find their own capital. It was now proposed to open the Local Loans Fund to rural bodies in the same way as to urban bodies, and in this way it would be the same value to them as if they were given grants of £50.

In reply to Mr. CORISH (Labour, Wexford), the MINISTER said he could not state what these terms were. It would depend on the terms upon which the Government could borrow. If they could borrow cheap the local authorities would get the money cheap.

Urban deputies had suggested, the Minister continued, that there should be a national charge for housing, and he referred to the case of Ennis, where, on the appointment of a Commissioner, rates had been reduced from 16s. to 9s.

Mr. P. HOGAN (Labour, Clare) said that the high rate in Ennis was not due to bad administration, but to the increase of valuation and the dismissal of workmen.

The MINISTER said that £3,000 a year was saved to the ratepayers, and it was not too much to expect that in the matter of housing they should make a contribution.

If there were more co-operation between the local authorities and headquarters in Dublin on the question of cost, it would go far towards solving housing problems, and he appealed to local authorities and their officials to address themselves to this very important aspect of the housing situation. He suggested that no better Housing Board could be got for Dublin than the Dublin Corporation, and this was because there was close co-operation with the Central Authority.

A NATIONAL MIND.

Continuing, Mr. MULCAHY said that it was hard to suggest that any Housing Board could do more national work than local authorities. The policy of the bill, if it created discontent, would be the discontent of putting the problem up to local authorities and local officials. There should be a national mind on this matter. If reconstruction was necessary in rural areas he would suggest that the Land Improvement Act or the Agricultural Credit Corporation was sufficient to meet it. So far as the use of Irish materials was concerned, the pros and cons had been considered, and there was a limit in increased cost beyond which they were not prepared to go, because it would keep people out of houses.

The second reading was agreed to without a division, and the Committee stage was fixed for Thursday next.

Meanwhile the Minister agreed to circulate an explanatory note dealing with the financial clauses of the bill.

EXPIRING LAWS.

The Committee stage of the Expiring Laws Bill, 1931, moved by Mr. Mulcahy, Minister for Local Government and Public Health, was passed without a division.

CUSTOMS DUTIES.

THE TAX ON PETROL.

On the second stage of the Finance (Customs Duties) No. 4 Bill, 1931,

Mr. LEMASS (F.F., Dublin South) said that the effect of the increased tax on petrol would be that many omnibuses would be put off the road. From 1928 until immediately before the introduction of the additional impost the tax upon omnibuses had been increased by 500 per cent. This new impost was an increase of £150 per 'bus per year. If the tax were put into operation, he believed that in the long run, through the decrease in the number of 'buses, the Exchequer would lose a huge sum of money every year.

Mr. BLYTHE, Minister for Finance, said that he had already informed representatives of 'bus owners that he was ready to meet them and examine any figures that they might have. At the same time he did not say that there was cause for a reduction in the seating tax, because he believed that 'buses should be made to pay something towards the repair and upkeep of roads. The seating tax was, he believed, a fair assessment for the amount of value that they got out of the roads. If they reduced it, private individuals or other business firms would be taxed unfairly.

Petrol was cheap, but if it were dear, then, perhaps, he would consider a revision of the tax. If the petrol combines dictated an increase per gallon there would not be so many declarations of protests, but motorists and others would quietly adjust themselves to the new situation. If motor 'bus services were not paying, then they should look to uneconomic services, of which there were many.

The second reading was passed by 74 votes to 41, and the committee stage was fixed for Wednesday next.

MINES AND MINERALS.

On the committee stage of the money resolution of the Mines and Minerals Bill, 1931,

Mr. LEMASS (F.F., S. Dublin) said that the board to be established under the bill would have no power to make any decisions in relation to State mines or minerals. The Minister could receive recommendations of the board, and then go his own course. The Dail should examine whether or not it would be preferable to have a board established in accordance with a definite plan, subject to definite legal restrictions, but empowered to act itself without the veto of the Minister. Such a board might be able to embody as part of its work the general development of the country's mineral resources.

Mr. McGILLIGAN, Minister for Industry and Commerce, said that he proposed to have a board acting in an advisory capacity as to what leases of State mines and minerals should be made. There was no suggestion that the board should have the final making or refusal of leases. In such an important matter it was his opinion that one person only should be responsible. The members of the board, said the Minister, or some of them, would probably have to be paid.

Progress was reported.

On the motion on the adjournment, Mr. DAVIN (Lab., Leix-Offaly), speaking with regard to certain orders made by the Queen's County County Council, which he alleged were not carried out, asked the Minister if he would inquire fully into the matter. If the Minister would not do so, then the spirit of Article 56 of the Public Bodies Order was not being observed.

The MINISTER said that apparently Deputy Davin wanted the salary of the County Surveyor to be reduced, or else the suppression of the County Council.

Mr. DAVIN insisted that the paid officials of any council could not disobey orders and instructions given at a statutory meeting.

The Minister said that the County Council did not now wish for an inquiry.

Mr. GORRY said that he objected to interference with the affairs of the Council by anyone outside.

The House adjourned until to-day at 10.30 a.m.

A DAIL COMMITTEE.

THE CHARITABLE HOSPITALS BILL.

It was announced in the Dail yesterday evening that the Committee of Selection had nominated the following deputies to consider the Public Charitable Hospitals (No. 2) Bill:—Deputies Brennan, S. Broderick, Derrig, Doherty, T. Hennessy, Law, Mongan, T. Murphy, S. T. O'Kelly, Tubridy, and Ward.

GERMAN CALL TO B.I.S.

EXAMINATION OF CAPACITY TO PAY.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.
PARIS, Thursday.

AN AGREEMENT has finally been reached between France and Germany on the text of a letter which Germany is to address to the Bank for International Settlements at Basel, requesting the convocation of the Young Plan Consultative Committee on Germany's capacity to pay.

This followed a conversation between M. Laval and the German Ambassador early this afternoon.

According to the Temps, the letter contains the following phrase: "The German Government has come in good faith to the conclusion that Germany's exchange position and her economic situation might be seriously menaced by the partial or total transfer of the deferrable portion of the Young Plan annuity."

SHORT-TERM CREDITS.

A memorandum explaining the reason and purpose of this request will be handed simultaneously to-morrow to the Bank and to Germany's creditor countries, adds a message from Berlin.

It is further stated that, in view of the expiration of the maintenance agreement on February 29, a proposal will be made to the committees of foreign creditors by the Committee of German Debtors for speedy negotiations for the purpose of reaching a new agreement.

Great gratification is felt in Washington, says a cablegram from the U.S. capital, at the news of the agreement. It is believed that if reparations are successfully revised Congress would be more likely to agree to proposals for the reduction of war debts.

Meanwhile the United States Government is taking care to avoid the appearance of involving itself in what is regarded as a "purely European question." Nevertheless, the negotiations will be watched anxiously there, since Americans hold about 600,000,000 dollars (£12,000,000 at par) of short-term credits in Germany, due for repayment next February.

Unless there is definite indication that the plight of Germany shows an improvement, however, the question of the renewal of these credits will prove most difficult.

OPPOSED TO YOUNG PLAN REVISION.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.
PARIS, Thursday.

M. Laval remains utterly opposed to a revision of the Young Plan. This statement by the Premier was the salient feature of the second afternoon's debate on foreign affairs in the Chamber, and was evoked by a Socialist, who charged M. Laval with having adopted as his motto, "Say nothing and do nothing." He blamed M. Laval for not bringing up the question of disarmament at the Chequers Conference.

M. Laval retorted: "There was no question of disarmament. My remarks referred to a revision of the Young Plan. I would not hear of it then, and I will not hear of it now."

M. Marchandeau, Radical, urged that France must be circumspect in giving financial aid to other countries without receiving quid pro quo, particularly in the case of Germany.

ANOTHER GERMAN BANK SUSPENSION.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.
BERLIN, Thursday.

The Berlin Bank for Trade and House Property, with seven provincial branches, suspended payments to-day. The creditors comprise, for the most part, small shopkeepers and house-owners. It is expected that the Government will intervene in the interests of depositors. The liabilities are estimated at approximately £4,750,000.

UNITED STATES BANK CLOSINGS.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.
NEW YORK, Thursday.

A record in bank suspensions in the United States was reached during the month of October, when 512 banks, with total deposits of 566,000,000 dollars, closed their doors. About two hundred and twenty of the banks which closed earlier in the year have re-opened in the last three weeks, however.

During the first ten months of this year no fewer than 1,753 banks, whose deposits totalled 1,462,000,000 dollars, closed their doors. These deposits represent about four per cent. of the total bank deposits in the United States.

FATAL HOCKEY ACCIDENT.

COUNTY CORK BOY'S DEATH FROM TETANUS.

THAT deceased boy, Daniel Joseph O'Sullivan (11), Bridge street, Skibbereen, died of tetanus arising from a wound over his left eye accidentally received while playing hockey at Glencurragh on October 29th, was the verdict of Coroner Lucey at the inquest in Skibbereen Hospital yesterday.

Timothy O'Sullivan deposed that he was playing hockey with other boys, including the deceased boy. He struck the ball from goal, and in a tussle for possession between Ernie Adams and the deceased boy, the latter was struck by Adams's stick.

Donal O'Connell, an uncle of the dead boy, said that the boy was confined to bed for two days, and was then up and around as usual. Last Monday week he complained of stiffness in his left jaw, and on Saturday last he was sent to hospital. Medical evidence was to the effect that dirt from the hockey stick probably entered the wound, and subsequently caused tetanus.

FUTURE OF NEW DELHI.

MAY BE USED AS HOSPITAL.

MR. GANDHI AND THE CHANGE-OVER.

YESTERDAY'S discussions at the meeting at St. James's Palace of the Federal Structure Committee of the Round Table Conference were on the subject of commercial discriminations, one of the four "safeguarded" subjects.

Sir Phiroze Sethna said that Indians had no desire whatever to injure the legitimate interest of the European commercial community. Provided that there was a satisfactory political settlement, Indians would welcome European capital and skill in the development of India's resources.

PRIVILEGED CLASSES.

Mr. Gandhi, in a lengthy speech, said that for years India would be engaged in passing legislation in order to raise the down-trodden from the mire. "And if the landlords, Zamindars, monied men, and those who are to-day enjoying privileges—I do not care whether they are Europeans or Indians—if they find that they are discriminated against I shall sympathise with them, but I will not be able to help them."

The down-trodden would have to be given grants freely, said Mr. Gandhi, and those grants would come from monied classes, including the Europeans. There was no question of repudiation, but of taking over under examination under audit.

NEW DELHI.

Mr. Gandhi went on to refer to New Delhi, the recently completed centre of Indian Government.

"Crores have been spent upon it," he said. "Suppose that the future Government comes to the conclusion that this 'white elephant,' seeing that we have got it, ought to be turned to some use. (Laughter.) Imagine that in old Delhi there is a plague of cholera going on, and we want hospitals for the poor people. What are we to do? Do you suppose the National Government will be able to build hospitals, and so on?

"Nothing of the kind. We will take charge of those buildings, and put these plague-stricken people in them, and use them as hospitals, because I contend that those buildings are in conflict with the best interests of the nation."

WITHOUT COMPENSATION.

"If the National Government comes to the conclusion that that place is unnecessary, no matter what interests are concerned, they will be dispossessed, and they will be dispossessed, I may tell you, without any compensation—(laughter)—because, if you want this Government to pay compensation, it will have to rob Peter to pay Paul, and that would be impossible."

At the end of his speech, Mr. Gandhi was asked by Sir Tej Sapru: "Under your National Government no title in India is safe?"

Mr. Gandhi—Congress will decide those things, and, if there is any undue fear, I think it is possible to satisfy every legitimate doubt. Where complaints are made that there are legitimate rights acquired, it should be open to the Court of Law to examine these rights.

"I am not going to say to-day, in taking over the Government, that I shall examine no rights whatsoever, no titles that have been acquired."

BRITISH MERCHANTS.

Mr. Gandhi made the general point that the rights of the British commercial community should stand on the same footing as those of Indian-born subjects, but there should be no racial discrimination against British merchants and European houses.

The Committee adjourned until Tuesday next.

Earlier in the discussion Lord Reading said that if there were to be discriminatory administration or legislation, in the sense that legislation would penalise a powerful British concern in order to enable a smaller Indian concern to flourish, he would oppose that root and branch. It would be unfair to the British who had rights in India now, and who ought to have those rights continued.

He added that, however difficult it might be for an Indian nascent company to progress where there was a powerful British company in the same line next door to it, they could not legislate.

MR. GANDHI AND MR. GEORGE.

A THREE HOURS' TALK.

Mr. Gandhi saw Mr. Lloyd George for the first time during his present visit to England last night. Mr. Gandhi motored to Churt, and his visit lasted three hours.

It was towards midnight when Mr. Gandhi returned to London, having wished Mr. Lloyd George a happy journey to Ceylon and back.

CONSERVATIVE PARTY AND INDIA.

A special meeting of the Conservative Party Committee on India was held at the House of Commons last evening to discuss the position reached at the India Round Table Conference. Mr. J. Wardlaw-Milne, M.P., chairman of the Committee, presided over an attendance of about one hundred members. The proceedings were private, and it was decided not to issue an official report.

A deputation which had been appointed at the meeting had an interview afterwards with the Prime Minister and Mr. Baldwin at the House of Commons. It was officially announced that at the interview Indian affairs were discussed.

TWO CORK WINNERS FOUND.

CORK, Thursday.

"Song o' My Heart," which drew Cat o' Nine Tails in the sweep, is the nom-de-plume of Miss Georgina Bacon, who lives at Balmoral terrace, St. Luke's, Cork.

Yesterday there was considerable speculation in St. Luke's district, as at least two other people there had adopted the same nom-de-plume. It appears that she bought the ticket from Miss Lucey, of St. Anne's, who, not remembering her address, simply put "St. Luke's." The ticket is shared by Miss Bacon with nine others, including her brother and three sisters.

The identity of the "Three Musketeers," whose ticket drew Salaam, was also in doubt until to-day. The name was given as M. A. Hayes and the address O'Connell's avenue, Cork; but nobody of that name could be found in the street. The ticket, however, is held by M. A. Hayes, a Post Office employé. His mother said to-night that she thought confusion in the address occurred because O'Connell was living in that street at the time, and "O'Connell's avenue" was probably put on by mistake.

REVALUATION OF THE NORTH.

NEW BILL IN THE COMMONS.

HOW THE BUDGET WAS BALANCED.

BELFAST, Thursday.

THE adjourned autumn session of the Parliament of Northern Ireland will be resumed on Tuesday next, when there will be sittings of both the Senate and the House of Commons.

The business in the Senate will include the first reading of the following bills:—Insurance Companies Underwriters Bill, Agricultural Research Stations Bill, a Disease of Animals Bill.

THE COMMONS.

In the House of Commons a Valuation Bill will be introduced. This measure will set up the machinery for a general re-valuation in Northern Ireland, and in its progress through the House will meet with a considerable amount of opposition.

A Government Loans Bill will also be introduced, and the Expiring Laws (Continuation) Bill will be given a second reading.

A measure will be introduced to implement the promise of the Prime Minister to grant free sites for new industries, and giving local authorities power to forego rates upon new factories.

The House is expected to sit until near Christmas, and in addition to the business mentioned there will be Supplementary Estimates and an Appropriation Bill.

A BALANCED BUDGET.

It will not be necessary to introduce a Supplementary Budget in Northern Ireland, as the Budget was balanced early in the year by means of economies in the payments of members of the Cabinet and the Houses of Parliament, and in the salaries of the teachers and police, and also by a raid upon the Road Fund. The extra reserved taxation, including income tax, imposed by Mr. Snowden's last Budget, is expected to produce in Northern Ireland a larger surplus and Imperial contribution than was anticipated early in the year.

Any anti-dumping regulations or fiscal changes introduced in the British Parliament will automatically apply to Northern Ireland, unless Northern Ireland is expressly excluded.

Revenue from such regulations or fiscal changes will also increase the amount of Northern Ireland's surplus revenue and Imperial contribution.

FAREWELL LUNCHEON.

The members of the Irish Labour Party and the Irish Trade Union Congress gave a farewell luncheon yesterday in Wynn's Hotel to Dr. R. O'Connell (son of Mr. T. J. O'Connell, T.D., leader of the Labour Party in the Dail), on the occasion of his departure for Great Britain and Europe to commence studies in connection with a recently won scholarship. A large number of friends attended the luncheon, which was presided over by Mr. William Norton, Chairman of the Administrative Council of the Labour Party.

OBITUARY.

MAJOR-GENERAL R. A. MONTGOMERY.

The death of Major-General Robert A. Montgomery, C.V.O., C.B., took place yesterday afternoon at his residence in Greyabbey, Co. Down. He was born in 1848, and served with the Royal Artillery, of which he was Colonel-Commandant. After the South African War he was for a time at the War Office.

He held several responsible offices at the headquarters of the Royal Artillery, including Deputy-Director-General. He was Commander of the Coast Defences, Southern District, in 1905, and was Vice-President of the Ordnance Board from 1908 to 1910.

He succeeded to the Greyabbey estate on the death of his elder brother, Major-General W. E. Montgomery, about four years ago, and went to reside in the village in 1927.

He was married, and his wife predeceased him two years ago. There was no family of the marriage.

MR. MICHAEL McGANN.

The death took place yesterday in the Hospice for the Dying, Harold's Cross, Dublin, at the age of 82, of Mr. Michael McGann, a former Governor in the Irish Prisons' Service. Since his retirement in 1915, Mr. McGann resided on Iona road, Glasnevin, until early in October, 1929, when he entered the hospice, where he remained until his death. Mr. McGann entered the Prisons' Service in Dublin in 1875, and soon proved himself worthy of promotion. He was Governor in turn of the County Prisons of Castlebar Armagh, Kilmainham, Cork, Belfast and of the Maryborough Convict Prison. Mr. McGann enjoyed the confidence of the Prisons Board, and he was one of the most popular and successful governors. When in October, 1912, a vacancy occurred in the Governorship of Belfast Prison Mr. McGann had the unprecedented compliment paid to him by Lord Aberdeen, the then Viceroy of Ireland, of a letter in His Excellency's own handwriting offering him the vacant post, and expressing the hope "that it would be congenial to him to accept it." Having retired after forty years' service, he was appointed a magistrate for the City of Dublin by Lord Wimborne, the Lord Lieutenant, in 1916. When the Irish Free State was established, Mr. Kevin O'Higgins, then Minister for Justice, appointed him a Peace Commissioner. In 1917 the Municipal Council of Dublin appointed him a Visiting Justice to Mountjoy Prison, and that appointment was continued and confirmed by Mr. O'Higgins. In April, 1919, Lord French, then Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, appointed Mr. McGann to be a member of the Viceregal Commission to inquire into the circumstances under which Sinn Fein prisoners had then recently escaped from prisons in Dublin and Cork. After inquiries the Commission reported, and exonerated the prison officials from any complicity in the escapes or disloyalty to their duty. Mr. McGann, who was also a member of the Dublin Chamber of Commerce, was much respected by all who knew him.

MR. PETER J. MURRAY.

The death has taken place, at Dalkey, of Mr. Peter J. Murray, Chief Administrative Officer in the Free State Patent Office.

After a successful school career at the Richmond street Christian Brothers and Clongowes Wood College, Mr. Murray entered the British Civil Service in 1900. His outstanding ability and capacity for organisation secured early recognition, and in 1926 led to his selection for transfer to the Free State to assist in the establishment of the Patents and Trade Marks Department in the Irish service. It is generally known that the success of this department was largely due to his ability and expert knowledge.

The large attendance at his funeral bore testimony to the high esteem in which Mr. Murray was held.

MR. JAMES CLARKE.

Mr. James Clarke, D.L., Porthall, Lifford—one of Donegal's most prominent public men—died on Thursday morning.

The late Mr. Clarke was a member of the Donegal County Council, Vice-Chairman of the County Donegal Board of Health, a member of the County Donegal Vocational Education Committee, a member of the County Donegal Agricultural Committee, and a member of the Letterkenny Mental Hospital Committee.

He was a successful farmer, and his ability was recognised by his appointment as a Land Commissioner in the fixing of rents. In his earlier years he was a prominent member of the Grand Jury, having acted as Barony Constable.

He was the last surviving member of the original Strabane Hunt Club, and was also a prominent member of the Strabane Farmers' Club.

MR. HENRY R. VEREKER.

The death took place at 18 Cowper road, Rathmines, on Tuesday, of Mr. Henry Robert Vereker, M.I.C.E.I., at the age of 76.

Mr. Vereker worked for many years as a land agent in the West of Ireland, and joined the Congested Districts Board. He became Chief Inspector, and, with the abolition of the Board, he was transferred to the Land Commission, where he worked as Resident Inspector for a number of years.

THE AMERICAN MARKETS.

STOCKS CLOSE EASY.

REUTER'S TELEGRAMS.
NEW YORK, Thursday.

The Stock Exchange opened easy in fairly active trading. Southern Pacific fell in response to yesterday's reduction in the dividend to 1 dollar as compared with the previous 1 dollar 50 cents.

With no outstanding news to hand, Wall Street is concentrating its attention on corporate earnings and dividend prospects.

Later in the session the early decline was checked by covering in Rails by traders, who apparently did not intend to be caught by surprise in connection with developments in to-day's conference of the railway heads with the labour union leaders.

The losses were nearly all recovered, while many issues showed small net gains.

The list maintained its narrow gains in subsequent quiet trading, being helped by the better tone of commodities and an absence of unexpected adverse dividend news.

In the late dealings a resumption of selling reduced or cancelled most of the earlier gains, and the market closed easy.

The day's sales totalled approximately 1,500,000 shares.

Money on call closed steady at 2½ per cent. bid and 2¾ per cent. asked.

All business during the day was again concluded at 2½ per cent. Prime mercantile paper was quoted at 3¾ per cent. to 4 per cent.

CHICAGO, Thursday.

Trading on to-day's Wheat market was quiet, owing to pessimistic Stock market news. Advances were recorded in the early dealings on bullish foreign and Argentine news and buying by local interests, while there was good absorption by commission houses and buying by Eastern and South-Western interests. The rise was also assisted by bullish crop news from parts of Kansas and further reports of cold weather in the Argentine, together with covering purchasing by exporters, continued buying by local interests, and light receipts. Rumours of a strained relationship between Russia and Japan also had a bullish effect. Maize values improved on buying by commission houses, while the steadiness in wheat and the strong cash position also had a favourable effect. Advices of unfavourable weather for the movement, together with covering operations, light offerings and local support were further factors for the rise. Rye prices strengthened on Eastern buying and owing to a lack of pressure, while oats moved in unison with maize.

ANTI-DUMPING BILL.

FROM OUR PARLIAMENTARY CORRESPONDENT.
WESTMINSTER, Thursday.

IN Committee on the Abnormal Importations Bill, in the House of Commons to-day, Mr. David Grenfell (Labour) moved an amendment to Clause 1 to exempt from the operations of the measure raw materials used in industry in the United Kingdom. He pointed out that it was only owing to the availability of foreign Bessemer steel that the tin plate and galvanised sheet industries had been able to keep going.

Mr. Hore Belisha, in resisting the amendment, said that the Government's desire was to protect rather than injure British industries. That was the reason why they did not propose to include in the bill commodities which came under the head of raw materials, but only articles manufactured or partly manufactured.

Sir W. Allen said that the amendment, if carried, would have a disastrous effect on the Ulster linen industry.

"ABNORMAL."

Mr. Lunn proposed that no importation should be deemed to be abnormal in quantity unless the Board of Trade was satisfied that articles of the same class and description were normally produced in sufficient quantities in the United Kingdom at reasonable prices. He said that his object was to prevent consumers from being fleeced.

Mr. Runciman said the simplest way of dealing with any "profiteering" that might arise was to withdraw the order.

Mr. T. Williams asked as to the position of cheap foreign cutlery, which could not be produced in this country at anywhere near the same price.

Mr. Runciman said that he had seen some of these foreign eightpenny scissors. He kept a sample in his pocket for a week, and at the end of that time it would not cut paper. Sheffield cutlery could hold its own as regarded quality against any cutlery in the world.

QUESTION OF SANCTION.

Mr. Parkinson (Labour) moved the first of a series of amendments designed to ensure that any Order made under the Act shall receive Parliamentary sanction before it becomes operative.

Mr. Percy Harris (Liberal) confessed to some sympathy with the proposal, as anyone aggrieved by the imposition of an Import Restriction Order would have no remedy whilst the House was not sitting. He suggested, therefore, that the operation of the Bill should be suspended when the House was in recess.

Mr. Runciman's objection to the amendment was that its adoption would largely defeat the whole object of the bill. This view was enforced by Sir Austen Chamberlain, who, however, suggested that the Government should afford something like a second reading discussion on the first batch of Orders made by the President of the Board of Trade. Such Orders would, be of special importance as indicating the manner in which the Board's powers would be administered.

After further debate, Mr. Runciman said that he would convey Sir Austen's suggestion to the Prime Minister.

The amendment was rejected by 353 votes to 45.

The bill passed through Committee, and was reported to the House.

THIRD READING.

On the motion for third reading, Mr. Lansbury dissented from the view that the great national emergency which existed "could ever be tickled by the bill before the House." It was a pill to cure an earthquake.

Mr. Runciman described the bill as the first step towards taking command of our destinies. We trust, he said, that, having done that, we shall be able to give freer play to our national recuperative capacities. (Ministerial cheers.)

On a division, there voted:—

THE IRISH CUP

LUCK OF THE DRAW : MAN WHO DREW TWO HORSES.

STILL CALLING THEM OUT—Mr. J. O'Sheehan, the Irish hospitals' sweepstake announcer, after calling out the names of nineteen drawers of every horse in the Manchester November Handicap on Wednesday, and 1,110 other prize-winners yesterday, has still 900 consolation prize-winners to announce. He is expected to finish his task to-day.

THE LUCKIEST MAN IN THE "SWEEP."—Mr. W. Burbidge, of Beckenham, who holds two winning tickets on behalf of a syndicate of ten bakers, the horses drawn being Argonaute II. and Bower of Roses. After paying an Irishman for a book of tickets, the syndicate purchased five tickets of another book, contributing a shilling a week each man, and two of these—consecutive numbers—"turned up trumps."

THE BLACK CAT OF LUCK—A black cat appeared on the scene when the draw was continued yesterday, scattering good luck to all parts of the world. Here it is seen surveying the shoot into which the announcer dropped the winning counterfoils, one by one, after calling out the names of the lucky holders.

THE LUCKY BRICKLAYER—Mr. J. Moore, who drew Rackety Lassie. He lives at 109 Capel street, Dublin.

FIRST TO BE DRAWN—The first counterfoil out of the drum was that of Miss M. Byrne, of Cannizans, Wimbledon, London, the horse being Argonaute II. Miss Byrne photographed after hearing of her good fortune.

BUSINESS AS USUAL—Mr. John Evans, a grocer, of Choden road, South Bermonds y, who drew a Castlebagot ticket, carried on his business as usua , apparently quite unmoved by his good fortune.

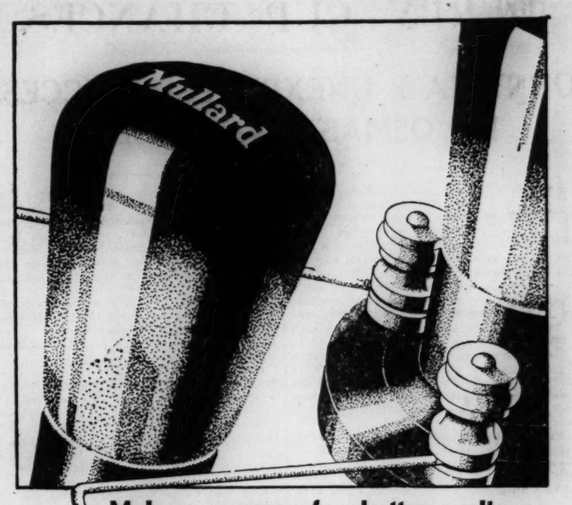

THE BARMAID'S TOAST — Mr. William Meahin ("Old Sport"), of Shooters Hill road, Blackheath, who has drawn Argonaute II., being toasted after the news of his success came through.

When food ferments, disagrees, lies like lead in the stomach, it's a sign of too much acid. You need not resort to drastic doses of soda—take instead an antacid that will correct the condition. 'Milk of Magnesia.'

A spoonful of this soothing alkali restores a proper alkaline balance to an acid-soaked system. Then the stomach, liver and bowels function as they should.

'Milk of Magnesia' is what you need when bad breath or coated tongue indicates too much acid.

Take a spoonful to-day, and for several days, and see how soon it sweetens the entire system.

Your digestion will be improved vastly; things will taste better; and you will feel better in so many ways. Also, you will find when your system is properly alkaline you are not so susceptible to ailments, or colds. An alkaline balance gives you resistance.

FROM OUR TRAVELLING CORRESPONDENT.
DERBY, Thursday Night.

THERE will be between twenty and twenty-five runners for the Derby Cup here to-morrow, when, unless the conditions will have vastly improved on those of this afternoon—and I cannot see how they can improve much—the race may develop into a great scramble in the mud, for the turn into the straight here is a sharp one, and there is barely room on the round course for such a field.

The results to-day have prepared us for a victory for one of the light-weights, for after twenty-four hours of almost incessant rain the course is in a bad state, and there is also a long growth of grass on it, which renders it even more holding.

Those connected with the remarkable mud-larking filly Summer Princess will not be displeased with the conditions, for she revelled in them when she won the Prince Edward Handicap at Manchester. The only trouble in her case is that she would prefer to have two miles to go rather than a mile and three-quarters.

LIKES IT SOFT.

North Drift is another who will like it soft, for it was in a very bad state also at Manchester when he dead-heated for the Cup. He has never shown such good form since, but it is possible that he will improve on previous performances in the conditions that he will be facing.

It is likely that Captain Hogg would welcome it firmer for Evening Glory, but, all the same, her chance is a good one. Ut Majeur is to take his chance, but he has run this season well below his last year's form. Bonny Boy II. has a lot of weight for a little horse in such going, and I could incline more to the chance of Truncheon.

So far as I can gather, Nitakrit and not Oletta will represent the stable of Sam Darling, and the filly certainly has a chance on her running in the Lancashire Handicap last week, won by West Wicklow. Ursula is a lightly-weighted filly who might easily gain a place, as she has been showing some form.

Pard deputises for Sir Joshua, but I cannot fancy him much. Rackety Lassie is nicely weighted, but I shall expect to see EVENING GLORY reverse the York running with her and win what in the circumstances looks like an open race. Ursula may gain a place.

BARELY SAVED.

It was at the fifty-ninth second of the eleventh hour that racing was saved here this afternoon. There had been a dense fog from eight in the morning, and at one o'clock, the advertised time of the first race, it was still as bad as ever, and the gates had not been opened to the public.

Just at the moment when abandonment for the day was being decided on the sun suddenly burst through. In five minutes the fog had disappeared, the gates were opened, and racing went through in bright sunshine and a light that was a vast improvement on that of yesterday. The racing, however, was not so good all round.

Lord Howard de Walden's Ortygia is quite clearly a far better filly over seven furlongs than she is over shorter distances, for she won the Osmaston Nursery from a good field, which included Gaterina, by three lengths running away. It was the first time she had not been well backed by the public, for she was a 10 to 1 chance, but she had appeared several times to let her supporters down, for she would not show her trial form, which was very good on a racecourse.

LIKELY TO BE A STAYER.

Dawson Waugh has always had a high opinion of the filly, and it must be said that he was a little nonplussed by her running, especially at Newbury, where she failed badly. She gave promise here that she will stay well next season, which is more than can be said of some of the other two-year-old fillies who have been winning.

Gaterina was, of course, a good favourite, but she did not stay more than six furlongs, although she made the early running in company with Hunters Bar and La Croisette, who finished second on the far side.

One of those who have been fortunate enough to draw Hot Bun in the Irish Hospital Sweepstake is Mr. James W. Ramsden, the prime mover in the conduct of the Manchester racecourse, who has horses in training with Douglas Pickering. Mr. Ramsden is sure of a good run for his money, for Braime greatly fancies the mare, whom he thinks to be the best he has ever had.

Hot Bun would very likely have won the Liverpool Cup had Bobby Jones known her peculiarities better, and she may well emulate Blue Don, who lost at Liverpool and then won at Manchester.

THREE OUTSIDERS PLACED.

Mr. Ramsden ran Multorb in the Chatsworth Plate, but the colt was not good enough, and was beaten out of a place behind three outsiders, Winsome Way, Semitone and Haymarket, all of whom were among the 100 to 6 others. The first-named, who made still another winner for Frank Butters, was not so little fancied as the betting indicated, and, judging by the style in which she finished, two lengths in front of the second, she represented something like a good thing at the weights.

Beary can be a very forceful jockey at times, and he certainly forced the Aga Khan's Taj Ud Din through a narrow opening at the turn into the straight in the Hardwicke Maiden Plate, which he finally won by half a length from Lesterbridge, with Plantagenet third. Plantagenet did not have his chance improved when Beary was coming through.

A BREAK IN CONTINUITY.

Favourites in selling races have been remarkably successful this week, but there was a break in the continuity when the Hailstone colt swerved away his chance in the Elvaston Castle Plate, and was third behind Stanley Wootton's Bolivia, who was second favourite, and had a host of followers; so that bookmakers did not profit much by the race.

It was quite different with the other selling event, which Lanson, a winner last week, won with the greatest of ease from Gazonit. The winner is trained by Jack Colling, and no trainer has been so consistently successful right from the beginning of the season. From a stable which is mostly composed of horses bought cheaply as yearlings, and most of them not above plating class, he has turned out the winners of fifty-six races since the season began.

Gordon Richards had a winner when he took the Allestree Welter on Mrs. Martin Hartigan's Land o' Burns, who started favourite, came from the far side of the course to the rails, and although inclined to hang to the right, as he did when he destroyed his chance in a selling race at Birmingham the other day, won by three parts of a length from Saugor.

SELECTIONS.

The Derby Cup to-morrow, as already mentioned, may be won by EVENING GLORY.

In the Friary Nursery I like best the chance of the penalised GOLD STREAK, while Damerham may win the Chaddesden Plate.

AT DERBY TO-DAY.

MANY CANDIDATES FOR NOVEMBER HANDICAP IN DERBY CUP.

THE Derby Cup is the only trial event for the Manchester November Handicap, and, though both events have never been won by the same horse in the same year, some valuable pointer is usually gleaned from the running of the Derby race. Thirteen of the twenty-two probable runners for the Cup to-day are engaged in the Handicap. One of them is Ut Majeur, who is the top weight in both events.

Ut Majeur needs a lot of work before he is at his best, and he is a back-end performer. His performances earlier in the season appeared to indicate that he was on the decline, but subsequent races have shown that he is still a force to be contended with. He ran exceedingly well against Noble Star at Newmarket, and previously had performed creditably in the Jockey Club Stakes, again at Newmarket. He should be good enough to give weight away to such as Bonny Boy II., Buoyant Bachelor and Leonidas II. Truncheon will be a stiffer proposition, for the distance will suit him, and he is very well weighted by the handicapper. Prince Paradise has missed one or two tempting engagements for this race, and he finished in front of Truncheon in the Cesarewitch. The pair meet on similar terms, and there may not be much between them at the finish. Boldero has only one pace, but a favourable case can be made out for Notice Board, who will be ridden by F. Fox.

Rackety Lassie and Evening Glory finished third and second respectively to Salome at Newmarket. Rackety Lassie has a 5lb. advantage this time, and the form may be reversed. North Drift and Pard have little chance on their Newbury performances, and I have no fancy for Auction Pool. Nitakrit is one of the best-handicapped horses in the race and will be prominent, but the best pair may be Ut Majeur and Prince Paradise, and the last-named must represent me.

The big race will, of course, be the most interesting event on the card, but as a betting proposition no race appears to be so attractive as that for the Chaddesden Plate, in which this year's Lincolnshire Handicap first and second are to run. Fleeting Memory, the highest-weighted competitor, has done nothing recently, but a good chance is held by Red Queen, who ran extremely well at Liverpool. Africorn has won in northern company, and The Lynx is reported to be fancied. Mary Mac is fit, and Damerham is improving rapidly. He ran well in Swiss Navy's race at Liverpool, but I do not think that he or anything else will beat Red Queen.

Lawson's Nust may be good enough to win the Friary Nursery, though Permarch and Sir Troops are certain to make a race of it.

HUNTING

WARD UNION HOUNDS.

The meet on Wednesday was changed from Dunshaughlin to Tara to hunt an outlying stag which had remained near Dowdstown during the summer, after making his escape across the Boyne on several occasions last season. A quick find was made in the woods of Lismullen, the stag being almost immediately away by Philpotstown, across the main Navan road into Dowdstown, with the pack in hot pursuit. Here they threw up on the banks of the Boyne, where the stag crossed the river to Ardsallagh, and were held around by Bellinter Bridge before recovering the line over Boyne Hill and running to the outskirts of Navan. Leaving here the hunt headed towards Boyerstown, and then turned for Ardbraccan, the stag holding a long advantage of the pack. Hounds continued on into a very boggy country around Robinstown, and crossed the flooded Dunderry River twice before they ran back by Meadstown to Dunderry village, and hounds were stopped in the dark. It was a long, tedious hunt of over three hours on a poor scent, the stag doing a considerable amount of road work.

FINGAL HARRIERS.

ANOTHER GOOD FOX HUNT.

A good sized field for the north end of country met hounds at Springhill on Friday last, 13th inst. A hare found on Knocklyon ran over Springhill to the Grallagh, and on to Cottrelstown, where she took to the road for some distance, and went through Mr. Butler's farm to Wyestown Bog, where she was lost. Almost immediately an outlying fox was found, and hounds went away very fast through Jordanstown, where he got to ground in a big earth on the river bank. Knocklyon was tried again without response.

From the meet at Rowelstown last Tuesday a capital day's sport was enjoyed. The first draw was Mrs. Griffin's farm, where an outlying fox went to ground immediately in a rabbit burrow. Without much delay he was bolted, and gave a brilliant 35 minutes without a check. Hounds started off at a great pace over Scatternagh to Drishogue, and bearing to the left here ran through Barnstown, and on to Killeen, thence by the Wren's Nest to the Oldtown road, which they crossed into Mooretown, and on through Fieldstown East, almost to Mr. Ward's house. The fox re-crossed the road, close to Fieldstown Bridge, and ran back to Rowlestown, and he got to ground near where he was found. A nice ring with a hare on Mr. Ward's farm followed, and while the huntsman was casting hounds another outlying fox was viewed away. The pack hunted him through Fieldstown West, and along the banks of the river, to Greenogue, and to Rapley, where he wheeled sharp to the right, and went on through the Northlands to Whitestown, where collie dogs coursed him, and nothing further could be done.

DUHALLOW HOUNDS.

Meeting at Rock Mills on Thursday, 12th. Hounds moved off to draw Mr. Stackpool's covert. There were a brace of foxes here, and the pack hunted up and down the glen for over an hour, but failed to push one into the open. Going on to the new covert at Lisnagourneen, which has only been drawn once before, last year—hopes rose high that it would hold—and this proved to be the case, and hounds were quickly away, and ran very fast over a lovely line of country to Upper Conver. After circling round the covert a couple of times they went down to Convermore and back, and continued hunting in the covert for a long time, until it became so foiled that nothing more could be done.

A large field turned out on Saturday at Cahirmee Cross. Knockaneed was the first draw, and hounds were soon away towards Ballyellis. Here the fox was headed, and turning back got to ground in a bank.

Lough Eagle was blank, but, as usual, Regan's Rock held plenty of foxes. The hunted fox first pointed for Velvetstown, but turning left-handed past Lough Eagle ran on to Ballyellis House, where he swung right-handed, and went back to Knockaneed. The next fox was found in Mr. Connor's glen, and was chopped almost at once. Oldcourt held, but this was a stay at home customer, and after wandering up and down the glen for some time finally discovered a rabbit hole, in which he was left. Kilcoleman Bog was next visited, but unfortunately the fox that was here must have been disturbed before hounds arrived, as they could only hunt slowly on a stale line to Rossagh.

A splendid day's sport followed the Beeneskehy meet on Monday last. Drawing the mountain behind the village a brace of foxes were soon on foot, and hounds rattled one up one side of the glen and down the other, finally killing him. Finding again round the end of the glen three foxes were seen just in front of hounds, but two turned back, and the other one ran his ring towards Burnfort. Coming back to Beeneskehy, he led on nearly to Minos before turning up towards Glownegare, and was killed in the glen after a good hunt of an hour. A good fox from Barrett's Gorse left Glownegare on his right, and went straight to the top of the mountain, where he got to ground.

Tuesday was very wet for the Lisgriffin Cross meet. Finding in Roach's Gorse hounds ran on to Annagh Bog, and marked their fox to ground at Carrigeen. Dunbarry, Glover's Glen, and Leary's Glen were blank, and home was the order.

GOLF.

AMATEUR'S GREAT ROUND.

In a 36 holes four-ball match played over the new course of the Addington Club, near Croydon, Surrey, yesterday, Reginald Straker, former amateur champion of Surrey, and W. L. Hope, a British international golfer, beat Fred Robson, the Addington Palace professional, who has played for Britain against America, and A. J. Lacey (Selsdon Park), a leader of the junior professional school, by 4 and 3.

The combination of the giant Mr. Straker, a sixteen-stone golfer, and Mr. Hope, one of Britain's finest exponents, must now be regarded as the most successful partnership in the country. The amateurs received a start of four holes. More than once Robson and Lacey gained a hole of their concession, but Hope in the afternoon played one of the most remarkable rounds ever seen at Addington. He went round in 66—three strokes better than the record—and gave his opponents no chance, since the bogey of the course is 78. The amateurs' best ball score was 61. They were still 4 holes up at the end of the first round, were dormy 6, and won at the fifteenth hole after a brilliant rally by the professionals.

Gossip from Newmarket.

NEWMARKET, Thursday Night.

WE had a tremendous amount of rain during the night, and the going this morning was very heavy, with the result that many of our teams had only health exercise.

Day was on the Racecourse side, and the only two to do work were the Liverpool Cup third, Blandearna, who galloped sharply six furlongs with Batt of Traf.

It was over five furlongs that Frank Butters sent Ut Majeur by himself, and there can be no doubt as to his improved action since we have had rain. He has a big weight to carry in the Derby Cup to-morrow, but he is built well up to it.

Firdaussi, who runs for the Hurst Park Great Two-Year-Old Race on Saturday, kept Dreamy Tremor and Manbo well on the stretch in a fast five furlongs spin. His chief opponent will be Short Hand, whom he just defeated at our last fixture.

J. Jarvis sent Short Hand with Bull Point and Gareloch five furlongs at a fast pace on Long Hill. Light o' Love, who is to run at Manchester next week, had Larking and The Niche for companions in a similar spin. The Derby Cup horse, Buoyant Bachelor, with Damerham and Redeswater, had a good five furlongs burst.

The only one to work in Hogg's team was Evening Glory, and we were able to look over Lord Glanely's filly at close quarters. She still carries a gloss on her coat which denotes her well-being, and, although going by herself in a fast five furlongs gallop, one could see she was relishing her work.

Darling's Oletta will not be in the field for the Derby Cup, but, as I have already informed my readers, she will be seen out for the Delamere Handicap at Manchester. With Tullycross, Ardglass and Pitter Patter she was slipped along over five furlongs.

Cannon rattled Suspense along with Legato and Gladly over seven furlongs. She returned from Windsor without running. I notice that Miss Clayton has her engaged in the Sedgeley Handicap at Manchester, and if a suitable jockey can be found for her, she will be difficult to beat.

Kolinsky colt and Bayonet galloped sharply five furlongs. The former may be seen out for the Drakelow Selling Plate to-morrow, and he will want beating. It was a similar gallop that Sarafan had with Sawston.

The going at Derby is very heavy, and trainers and owners may cancel arrangements already made. I do not intend to beat about the bush for the Stainsby Selling Handicap, but shall depend upon

Other runners will be Big Surprise, Hellenist, Skibbereen, Talpra and Blue Rock.

Ole King Sole proved in his last race that he is capable of staying the distance of the Drakelow Selling Plate. Count Equerry should improve upon his last running, but I intend again to support the claims of KOLINSKY COLT.

Call Girl I like better than Alpine Call and Permarch for the Friary Nursery. Vermeil should beat David's Gain, but I shall reply upon GOLD STREAK*.

Not since Constant Son won the Derby Cup have the spoils come to Newmarket. Day has Blandearna running on this occasion. Had the distance been the same as the Liverpool Cup, in which he was third, I should have liked his chance better. Since we have had rain Ut Majeur has improved in his action, and he should beat Bonny Boy II. I expect to see Buoyant Bachelor run well. The stable companions, Leonidas II. and Nitakrit, represent different ownership. On their running at Lingfield it should be a near thing between the last-named and Ocean Wave. I have no fancy for Fairy Prince. Boldero, who finished second last year, is again fancied. I am, however, expecting a good race between Evening Glory and Rackety Lassie. They can renew their Newmarket Oaks battle. The latter is now in receipt of 5lb. for a length beating, and having done so well in her gallops I shall support the claims of

I look to

to improve upon his Liverpool form and run close for the Chaddesden Plate, and

GREEN CHARTREUSE

COURSING.

AN INTERNATIONAL SEMI-FINAL TO-DAY.

By Our Special Correspondent.
LIMERICK, Thursday Night.

BENNACHIE, Dainty Man, Glenlavat and Deeside will contest the semi-final round of the Irish Cup at Clounanna to-morrow, and so, for the first time in the history of the Cup, the closing stages will partake of an international flavour. Bennachie is owned by the son of the nominator, the well-known English courser, Mr. Edward Baxter; Dainty Man hails from Kerry County, Glenlavat is one of Mr. Gorey's big string at the Burnchurch kennels outside Kilkenny, and Mr. J. V. Rank, the Fnglish courser, owns Deeside, which he sent over to this country to be trained at Limerick last season, when he won the Greenall Cup shortly after his arrival.

BENNACHIE FANCIED.

A remarkable feature of the Cup so far is that the only one of the four remaining in which got anything like even an average Clounanna course was Deeside, which in his bye this evening had to go the whole way; but that would have the effect of but balancing the handicap, as in his three first efforts he got off much lighter than any of the others. Even now it would not be easy to pick the winner of the stake, but everything points to the success of Mr. Baxter's dog, which, I think, will likely go to slips with Deeside for the deciding course.

MR. E. BAXTER.

There are many, however, who are inclined to the view that Dainty Man will pull down the flag of the Englishman, but he will have to be much busier with his game than he was in his course with The Master Mummer this morning, as when the hare broke from him he threw up his head and began to look around him. Bennachie, on the other hand, ran his courses out resolutely, and his good mouth has saved him a considerable amount of hard work. Glenlavat, in his bye and in his course with Pal o' Mine, maintained his pace of the first day, but when the hare stood up to Deeside, the bye dog, following the fawn's short spin with Kilnaglory, Mr. Matthews' nomination did not relish it in the least.

GRACULUS LUCKY.

There was only one upset in the Cup courses, when Happy Lad went under to Graigueswood Boy, but there was nearly being a second, and I am not so certain that as the course was run there should not have been. I allude to the trial between Graculus and Myles the Slasher. Admittedly the angles at Clounanna are extremely disconcerting at times, but the majority of the onlookers thought that the decision in favour of the Kilkenny dog should have been the other way about. To the crowd it seemed as Myles the Slasher shot out for the turn when Graculus overdid the steadying business nearing the hare, and that Myles, after taking the second, and almost with the hare in his mouth, stumbled, then the Kilkenny dog nicked in for three or four at the most strong points, the other finishing with a good kill. The judge must have seen something that we missed, otherwise the Clonmel dog must have got the flag.

HARES WEAKER.

The coursing was not even as good as on the first day, for rain again fell heavily through the night, and the hares were much weaker. As a matter of fact, Clounanna has not lived up to its reputation, and the game here has not been much stronger than at the majority of the meetings elsewhere this season.

The Purse and Plate, as usual, lost interest by reason of the number of withdrawals, and altogether it was a disappointing day's sport for the premier Irish meeting.

DESCRIPTIONS OF COURSES.

THE CUP—THIRD ROUND.

BENNACHIE beat BEN AICLIN. Bennachie trailed away for a four lengths lead and held the second. The white collar nicked in for several good points, but Bennachie had a bit in hand when a short close working spin ended in the kill by the loser.

GRAIGUESWOOD BOY beat HAPPY LAD. Graigueswood Boy made the turn by a few lengths, and in the stretches held too many guns for the red collar, who, when placed, three times went on slightly to his shoulders, the black having a big majority.

DAINTY MAN beat THE MASTER MUMMER. Dainty Man was several lengths faster, and as the hare whipped from him, he looked about him, and the other nicked in for one and the kill.

GRACULUS beat MYLES THE SLASHER. In a good buckle Myles the Slasher shot up for the initial score. A sharply run course followed, but after Myles had scored the second he tripped. Graculus then set about him, but did not appear to have wiped out his arrears when Myles the Slasher nailed his game.

GLENLAVAT ran a short bye. With Luck drawn, Mr. Baxter's Eves Bouquet was the bye dog.

PAL O' MILE beat MASTER STROKE. The red collar reached the hare with a lead of two good lengths, and had so much the better of an average spin that the stronger finish and kill by the Clonmel dog was of no avail.

BOLTON'S CROSS beat BANAGHER GLEN. The later was just up and used the hare again. Fairly level exchanges followed, but in a heavy course Banagher Glen compounded long before it ended, and was soundly thrashed.

DEESIDE beat KILNAGLORY. Deeside went up three lengths in front, and after a few turns and an exchange, picked up a weak hare.

FOURTH ROUND.

BENNACHIE raced up four lengths from Graigueswood Boy, and went round stylishly for the second. The black was placed for a few quickly taken points, but the red collar resumed to bring down the hare in the nick of time.

DAINTY MAN beat GRACULUS—Dainty Man wore down the Kilkenny dog for a lead of a length and a half, and swung round brilliantly to floor the hare.

GLENLAVAT beat PAL O' MILE.—Pal o' Mile led from slips, but Glenlavat forged up for a two lengths lead. He stumbled when in possession after taking the second, and after an exchange Pal o' Mile killed.

DEESIDE, a bye; BANAGHER GLEN, drawn. Deeside was led in the bye and ran unsighted.

RUGBY FOOTBALL.

TRINITY ON TOUR.

Much general interest will be taken in the activities of the Dublin University Football Club next week during their tour in England and Scotland. They will meet Oxford University on Thursday next, and Edinburgh and Glasgow Universities on the following Saturday and Monday respectively. The Oxford match should be particularly interesting to those who remember the thrilling struggle last December at Lansdowne road, when Oxford only just scraped a victory with a lead of two points. The Trinity team this year will be captained by J. W. Stokes, who played such an inspired game last year at scrum-half. This year, however, he is playing in the full-back position, while P. J. G. Weir, who played for Wanderers last year, takes his place. Although J. F. MacNeice and St. J. Pike are the only two inter-provincials on the team, the side has been faring quite successfully in their matches up to date, and with reasonable good fortune they should do well on the tour.

FINAL WELSH TRIAL.

PROBABLES GIVE A CONVINCING DISPLAY.

PROBABLES ...... 40 POSSIBLES 0

The final Welsh international trial match, played yesterday afternoon at Newport, resulted in a most convincing victory for the Probables fifteen over the Possibles by five goals and five tries (40 points) to nothing.

Rarely has a trial game in the Principality produced such splendid football as that revealed by the Probables' team, who in the perfection of their understanding played like a club side. Behind a fine set of forwards, who, without overwhelming the Possibles' pack, were always better than their opponents, Powell and Ralph, the halves, found the opportunity to combine with the same high degree of skill as they showed in the later international fixtures last season, and their contribution to the success of the Probables formed, perhaps, the most striking feature of a remarkable game. Ralph took his passes with wonderful certainty, while he also ran with real brilliance and passed accurately. Consequently the task of the three-quarters became comparatively easy. The forwards rendering good support, many brilliant movements were executed. Not merely did the men behind the scrummage run brilliantly, but they showed great variety in their methods of attack, more than once completely outmanœuvring their opponents. Still, large as was the score in their favour, the Probables never had matters entirely their own way, but they certainly made the best use of their chances.

Probables led at half-time by 17 points, a wet ball proving no handicap to excellent passing. Frank Williams, W. Davies, Ralph, Morley and Boon all got tries, Glyn Daniel, who came in at centre in place of C. Davey, converting one. After the interval further tries were added by Skym, Morley, Ralph, Boon and Day, Daniel kicking four more goals. Guy Morgan, injured late in the opening half, took no part in the second stage, S. L. Jones (London Welsh) filling the vacancy in the Possibles' three-quarter line.

A DRAW AT OXFORD.

MAJOR STANLEY'S XV. 24

A very good match at Oxford yesterday afternoon ended in a draw, Oxford University scoring three placed goals, a penalty goal, and two tries, to three piced goals and three tries by Major Stanley's XV. All through the game play went on at a very fast pace, while the handling and passing of both teams reached an admirable standard. Four times Stnley's side got the lead, but on each occasion the Dark Blues fought back pluckily, and they deserved to share the honours. Stanley's XV. stood two points ahead at the interval, Gadney (2), Harrison, and Bedford getting tries for them, two of which were improved, and Oxford replying with tries by Lorraine, Brookes, and Walde. Henley converted one and kicked a penalty goal. In the second half tries for the visitors were added by Bedford and Hordern, and for the University by Roberts and Druitt. Henley placed two more goals. High Cost of Electricity.

Navan Protest Meeting.

NAVAN, Thursday.

AT a public meeting of the users of electricity, which was held in Navan Courthouse, Mr. Elliott (Chairman, Navan Urban District Council), who presided, said that in 1923-24 the Urban Council obtained a loan of £15,000 on the security of rates and established a local hydro-electric station. Had the undertaking been a failure the ratepayers would have to foot the bill. A further thousand pounds had been expended on extensions. From the start principal and interest had been paid regularly. On principal £7,033 had been paid, plus £5,550 interest, and about £400 income tax. When the Shannon Power Act came into force the Council was precluded from adding to the plant or reducing the price of the current, which remained at 10d. per unit for light. When the Electricity Supply Board took over their plant the Council had all payments for principal and interest met to date, and, in addition, there was a credit balance in the bank and money outstanding to the sum of £1,500. Had there been no Shannon scheme the Council would have been able to reduce the price to the consumers. If they had been left to themselves the price would not exceed 6d. per unit for light, with a corresponding reduction for power.

SUCCESSFUL UNDERTAKING.

Mr. M. O'Donnell said that they had the finest station that could be found in Ireland, and this successful enterprise, the property of the ratepayers of Navan, was now taken over by the Electricity Supply Board. He presumed that it was to be scrapped and no compensation given to the ratepayers. The Electricity Supply Board had now decided to increase electricity charges. Protests were raised all over the country, but he was afraid it was a case of a voice crying in the wilderness. The property of the people was being confiscated, and all that was the work of Mr. McGilligan and the Executive Council. Quite recently Mr. McGilligan applied for a further two million pounds to keep the scheme alive, and the amount was granted. Was it any wonder the Board was lavish in expending public money?

THE SHOW ROOMS.

They had wonderful show-rooms in Dublin, liberally staffed and liberally fitted up. This was a time for plain speaking, and people must make their voices heard in protest against the excessive expenditure. The State and its undertakings must be carried on economically, and if the Government do not cut expenditure by two millions at least the plain people would send them about their business before another twelve months.

A committee was formed to enter into negotiations with the Electricity Supply Board, to try and get terms equal to what the local station could have supplied.

"A Breach of Faith."

South Tipperary Council's Protest.

CLONMEL, Thursday.

At a meeting of the South Tipperary County Council the Chairman said that they should protest against the action of the Electricity Supply Board in saddling consumers of electricity with a 25 per cent. increase.

Mr. Curran—We are unanimous about that.

The Chairman—It is a State scheme and a big business concern. Has it been worked as a business concern? We were told that we would get lighting for little or nothing.

Mr. Kennedy said that the increase would mean £800 a year extra on Clonmel.

Mr. W. J. Mulcahy said that the increase was a breach of faith with the people of the country.

The resolution of protest was adopted.

"An Absolute Monopoly."

SLIGO, Thursday.

That the increase of charges notified by the Electricity Supply Board is a distinct breach of faith with the trading community and general public, who were induced on the representations of the Board to instal electricity in place of gas, was the unanimous opinion of Sligo Chamber of Commerce.

The Chamber appointed Mr. D. M. Hanley on the deputation arranged by the Associated Chambers to obtain information from the Board.

Mr. Hanley said that the scheme was run as a Government department instead of being placed on a business basis.

Mr. H. C. Lyons said that at present the scheme was an absolute monopoly, and consumers had no protection against whatever rates the Board decided to charge. Expensive showrooms, lavishly fitted and liberally staffed, were opened in the towns and cities, and the fact that these were competing with local traders seemed unjust.

Mr. T. P. Toher—The whole trouble, I consider, is that the Shannon current is too cheap.

LIMERICK, Thursday.

The Electricity Supply Board, in a letter to the Limerick Corporation, states that the new scale of electricity charges will not affect public bodies in their contracts for public lighting. The contract with Limerick Corporation was stated by Alderman Reidy, Deputy Mayor, to be for three years with the Board. The Council, however, decided to hold the next quarterly payment until the Council's wishes were complied with in the removal of surplus lamps in a district to another area in which light was needed.

County Cork Protest.

CORK, Thursday.

At a meeting of the Kinsale Development Association, a discussion arose on the question of increased electricity charges, and several members stated that they did not see why Kinsale should have to pay 25 per cent. extra, while the increase in other places was only 12½ per cent. A resolution was adopted protesting strongly against this, and expressing the view that the Electricity Supply Board should publish properly audited accounts to the consumers.

"We consider," the resolution went on, "that we have a right to know the existing state of affairs of the Board, as we are of opinion that the necessity for this increase does not exist."

Do Modern Girls Dislike Domestic Service?

CARLOW, Thursday.

SPEAKING last night at the annual distribution of prizes to students of the Carlow Vocational Education School, and prizes won by National School children in the county under the National Thrift Essay competitions, the Most Rev. Dr. Cullen, Bishop of Kildare and Leighlin, dealing with the report of Mr. B. O'Neill, chief executive officer, said that they looked forward to the report with special interest, because it was the first report under the Vocational Educational system, and they would agree with him that they must congratulate everyone connected with the Carlow schools on the success that had been achieved.

Continuing, Dr. Cullen said:—"I am sorry to say that some of the people of the town of Carlow take very little interest in the work of these schools. Some of the employers take very little interest in them, and make very little effort to see that their assistants attend the classes. That is a great mistake, both for the employer and the assistant. It is a mistake for the employer, because his business would gain by the efficient service of his assistant, and it is a mistake for the assistant because efficient service always secures higher remuneration.

ADVICE TO PARENTS.

"Parents should take an interest in these schools, and they should insist on their children attending the classes. Boys and girls who neglect to take advantage of these classes are putting a very heavy handicap on themselves throughout life.

"There are just a couple of phases of the vocational education system to which I would like to draw attention. That which relates to domestic training and that which relates to agriculture. We all know that the domestic economy classes here have reached a very high standard under the very able and efficient instructress of domestic economy, Miss Mullally. These classes have been well attended, but there is quite a number of girls in Carlow who could have attended, and who have not. There seems to be an idea prevalent among girls that domestic service is something beneath them, something to be avoided. That is a great mistake. Whatever way you look at it—whether you look at it from the comfort of your own home, or from the point of view of remuneration when employed in a situation—I never yet came across anyone who did not appreciate a meal nicely cooked and neatly served, and I think it might be said with equal truth, as a meal served that way is appreciated, so also is the person who serves it up.

AGRICULTURE.

"With regard to agriculture, we all know that agriculture is the principal industry in this country, and that it is likely to remain so for a long time to come, and I think under this vocational system every effort should be made to cater for the education, the agricultural education of the farmers throughout the country."

In conclusion, the Bishop, dealing with thrift, said: "The nation wants thrift, and so does the individual, and, if a nation is not thrifty, it cannot be prosperous, so neither can the individual."

Site Problem Unsolved.

CORK, Thursday.

AT Cork Harbour Board meeting the general manager reported on a visit of the Commissioners to the oil tank installation at Haulbowline. In the course of the visit, the report stated, Mr. J. H. Varley, the installation manager, had outlined to them the development of Haulbowline in recent months, and said that the provision of further storage was under construction, as the demand for space already had exceeded expectations. The Haulbowline installation was ideally situated for the distribution of oil to other ports, but the company found themselves restricted as regards distribution in the Free State, because of their isolated position on Haulbowline.

THE SCHEME.

They had been anxious, therefore, to provide a storage installation on the mainland, preferably within the railway company's boundaries, consisting of six tanks, each holding about thirty tons, which would be fed by a pipe line from the island. This would enable them to distribute the oil throughout Ireland by means of the railway and road tank wagons. The landlord had, however, refused their application for a site on the ground that it would affect the amenities of the district, and the railway company had informed them that they were prohibited by the Railways Act of 1884 from using the land for any but railway purposes.

Mr. Varley stated that, as his company could not develop their property without the mainland installation, they sought the co-operation of the Harbour Board in the matter. It was suggested on behalf of the latter that possibly the landlord's objection might be got over if the tanks were built underground; but, if not, that the interested parties should jointly approach the Free State Minister for Industry and Commerce, with a view to getting the restrictive clause modified.

The report was referred to the Law and Finance Committee for consideration.

OF FIRST IMPORTANCE.

In an interview Mr. Richard Wallace, Chairman of the Cork Harbour Board, said that the projected developments at Haulbowline were of the first importance, and that every effort was being made to give them effect. The company, he said, were thinking of increasing their storage accommodation on the island by 25,000 tons, their present storage capacity being 15,000 tons. This accommodation would be let out to any oil company that wished to make use of it, and there were already indications that several firms were very anxious to take space. Their willingness to do so, however, depended greatly on whether the storage installation could be set up on the mainland. If this could be done, the cost of distribution, and consequently the price of petrol, would be greatly reduced in the Free State.

Mr. Wallace added that, in view of the facilities offered at Haulbowline, there was a distinct possibility that in future the cross-Channel boats from Cork would re-fuel there, instead of doing so in England, as at present.

Cork Council Affairs.

CORK, Thursday.

AT to-day's meeting of the Cork County Council—Mr. W. J. Broderick, chairman, presiding—a notice of motion appeared on the agenda in the name of Mr. P. O'Donoghue (who was absent), asking the Council to take immediate steps to organise Irish agriculture to ensure the production of the maximum amount of home-grown food on an economic basis for 1932; to prohibit the importation of all agricultural produce and manufactured articles of which quantities sufficient for home needs could be produced in Ireland, and to control the export of food supplies.

The Chairma s:id that the motion involved the whole ambit of political contention, and was a matter for the national assembly.

Mr. M. Corry, T.D., said that for want of a tariff on oats Irish farmers last year lost £100,000. This year, because the tariff came two months too late, it cost the farmers £37,000.

Mr. D. L. O'Gorman denounced a policy of tariffs. Tariffs would ruin the farmer. Every one so far imposed had hit him, and hit him hard.

No action was taken on the resolution.

A letter was read from Dr. Cohalan, Roman Catholic Bishop of Cork, communicating the acknowledgement of the Pope of the Council's resolution of sympathy which was passed some months ago. It was ordered that the letter be inserted on the minutes.

The Council decided, following similar action by the Mental Hospital Board, to send a deputation to Dublin to interview the Minister on the matter of the appointments of Secretary to the County Council and Resident Medical Superintendent to the Mental Hospital.

Railway Official Retires.

Mr. G. R. Wegg, rates and fares assistant to the manager of the London iMdland and Scottish Railway (N.C.C.), York road, Belfast, has retired from the company's service. When the Traffic Officers' Committee of the Irish Railway and Shipping Companies met at the Railway Clearing House, Kildare street, Dublin, his associates in the railway and shipping world presented Mr. Wegg with a wireless receiving set. The chairman of the committee, Mr. S. C. Little, general manager of the Sligo, Leitrim and Northern Counties Railway, spoke of Mr. Wegg's tact and courtesy. Mr. W. E. Richardson, secretary of the Irish Railway Clearing House, also joined in the tribute, and Mr. Wegg suitably replied.

Water Diviner at Work.

LONGFORD, Thursday.

MR JOSEPH BENNETT, Larnagh, New-townforbes, Co. Longford, a water-diviner of wide experience, who also claims to be able to locate by means of the hazel rod the existence of minerals and their position and depth in the ground, asserts that there are rich seams of gold in several districts in Ireland, including Counties Longford, Roscommon and Wicklow. Longford, he says, is rich in minerals.

Mr. Bennett has been carrying out experiments over a number of years, and has developed the "art" of "divining" to a remarkable degree. Not only is he able to discover sources of water supply, but also he is able to locate minerals and distinguish one kind from another, the rod acting in his hand in a certain way peculiar to the properties of each kind. He is, however, unable to explain the cause of the action of the rod, or why it acts in the hands of one person when over a water spring or mineral deposit and will not act with another person in a similar position. He thinks that electricity may have something to do with it. The rod twitches in his hand at the moment of divining despite any efforts he may make to resist it. He experiences a sensation, he states, as of a slight electric shock. Afterwards there is a reaction, and he feels more or less exhausted, a feeling which is more pronounced in the case of "divining" coal.

He has been through the Arigna (Co. Leitrim) and the Wicklow mineral districts in the course of his investigations and experiments. The Earl of Granard has displayed much interest in some of his experiments.

Cork Corporation and Cork Harbour Board have received letters thanking them, on behalf of the Pope, for resolutions of sympathy passed last summer.

New Technical Scho l.

CORK, Thursday.

FERMOY'S new Technical School was opened by the Most Rev. Dr. Browne, Bishop of Cloyne, in the presence of members of the Cork Vocational Education Committee and a large gathering of the towns-people.

At the luncheon, the Very Rev. Dr. Wigmore, Adm., Fermoy, said that in this country they were particularly fortunate in that Church and State worked in perfect harmony in matters of education. Now an additional link had been added to the chain, as the school in Fermoy was the first to be opened in the Free State since the Vocational Education Act came into force. They had to congratulate the Government on being so progressive as to introduce this measure, which would fill a long-felt want in the educational system of the country.

The Most Rev. Dr. Browne, speaking at the opening ceremony, said that a technical school was not a mere name. It was not a place in which idlers or loungers would find enjoyment. It was a place in which young fellows would be required to work with determination if they were to obtain a decent, honourable professional living. These young men ought to be, and must be, trained if they were to be fitted for these functions in life. They wanted young fellows who were prepared to study. The carpenter and the mason were wanted to send their boys to the technical school in order that they might become properly adapted to their professions. The school was for training boys and girls in their different functions in life, for training girls in knitting and cooking and all the other things necessary.

TONE AND COMMENT.

DUBLIN IRREGULAR. BIG RISE IN BANK STOCK.

Dublin Stock market, although far from active, yesterday presented quite a variety of price changes. The outstanding feature was a rise of eight points in Bank Stock to 328. The course of the market in Guinness units was disappointing. The opening price was a shilling over Wednesday's close, and the price held till the afternoon, when a bout of profit-taking sent it down to 83s. 6d., or sixpence lower on the day.

The Funds were fairly steady, except in the case of the Third Loan and Three per cent. Land Stock, which were weak.

The "bids" for Cables issues were on a reduced scale. Dublin Tram Ord. improved a shilling, but Alliance Gas eased to 10½.

The Industrial market was lifeless, and all the Ordinary Shares dealt in moved to lower levels. Oil Shares were a weak spot. Bolands Ordinary had a spectacular rise of 5s. 6d. to 45s. 6d., and Parent Trust Prefs. were bought at 1s. 9d.

LONDON WEAK.

BRITISH FUNDS AGAIN LOWER.

The London Stock Markets continued to suffer from lack of public attention, and the volume of business passing yesterday was again on an extremely modest scale, while a dull tone prevailed in practically every department. At the close a lengthy list of more or less substantial depreciations was shown, while in only a very few instances did the day's business result in an improved value being returned. Dull conditions characterised the gilt-edged section right from the outset, and the depreciation of the pound on the principal foreign exchanges accentuated the downward trend of prices, so that at the end losses were general. India Stocks generally were maintained, but among the Commonwealth 5 per Cent. and 6 per Cent. were each 2 points down on the day. Irregular conditions characterised the market for Foreign Government Stocks, though apart from German Bonds, which were rather heavily depressed, the movements returned were of modest proportions. British Rails were rather severely handled, and prices were marked back substantially all round. There was not a great deal passing among Colonial and Foreign Rails, but values were scaled back, the Buenos Ayres issues, Central Argentines, Leos, and San Paulo Ordinary, all losing ground. The Industrial sections, as a whole, attracted but scanty attention, and here also quotations went off in all directions, the losses in many instances being of substantial amounts. The trans-Atlantic issues opened decidedly lower, following the set-back in Wall Street overnight, and Swedish issues disclosed an easier tone. Banks, Stores, Electricals, and Iron and Steel were all dull markets, and Cables failed to hold an initial improvement. Breweries provided the one bright market, and among these a comparatively firm tone prevailed. Elsewhere Oils were marked back further under the leadership of Royal Dutch, while Mines continued on the down grade, Kaffirs and Copper issues losing ground all round.

THE INDUSTRIAL MARKET.

BANK SHARES DEPRESSED.

The trans-Atlantic counters enjoyed a moderate rally towards the close on buying from New York. Nickels improved from 11⅞ to 12½, Radios from 12 to 12½, and U.S. Steels from 86 to 86½.

Cables and Wireless stocks continued on the down grade, the Pref. losing 1½ at 61½, the "A" Ord. ¾ at 25 after 24½, and the "B" Ord. 1¼ at 13⅝. Marconi Marine gained the turn at 1 13/16.

Further scattered selling from the provinces was noticeable among Iron, Coal and Steel descriptions. B.S.A. Ord. reflected the loss shown in the accounts, the price falling 1s. 6d. to 6s. Guest Keens were marked down 1s. to 17s., and Hordens 1s. 6d. to 20s.

Apart from Rovers and Singers, Motors had a heavy appearance. Austins weakened to 28s. 9d., Fords to 38s. 9d., Leylands to 38s. 9d., with Napiers on offer at 5s. 6d., Rolls-Royce at 33s. 6d. and S.T.D. Motors at 1s. Thomas Tilling lost the turn at 2⅝, the new shares being finally 20s. 9d. prem.

There were more sellers than buyers about in the Rayon section. Celanese issues came back rather sharply. British Celanese Ord. relapsed 1s. 3d. to 11s., the First Pref. being offered at 9s. 6d., and the Second Pref. at 8s. American Celanese Common declined ⅛ to 1 1/16. Courtaulds dipped to 40s., but rallied later, and finished at 40s. 4½d. British Enka reacted to 7s. 6d., and Snia Viscosa to 7s. 10½d.

Textiles remained under the influence of the Fine Spinners' decision, and the Ord. shares of that undertaking gave way to 18s. 9d. J. and P. Coats declined to 44s. 9d., Patons and Baldwins at 28s. 9d., with Wardles on offer at 1 5/16, Sewing Cottons at 1 1/16 and Slubbers at 3s. 9d. Bleachers, Bradford Dyers, Listers and Linen Thread closed unchanged.

Tate and Lyle closed 3d. better at 40s. 4½d. Unilevers weakened 1/16 to 1½, as did Unilever N.V. to 1 7/16 and Slaters to 1 5/32, the last-named on further consideration of the report. Aerated Bread were not affected by the accounts, which became available after the official close.

Further support was forthcoming for Breweries at the opening, but as the session progressed an irregular tendency developed. Courage Ord. finished at 40s. 9d. after 41s. 6d., Guinness at 83s. after 84s. buyers, Watney Defd. at 37s. 6d. after 38s., and Meux at 25s. after 25s. 3d. Mitchell and Butlers improved to 42s. 9d.

The leading Tobacco shares lost ground in the absence of fresh supporting orders. Carreras "A" declined ⅛ to 3⅞, with the "B" shares offered at 9s. 9d. "Bats" weakened to 3 15/16 and "Imps" receded to a similar level.

Selling of Bank shares was on a larger scale, and prices came back rather sharply. Barclays "B" declined 2s. 6d. to 50s. and Lloyds partly paid 1s. 6d. to 44s. 6d.

Imperial Chemicals left off 6d. down at 17s. 1½d., the Pref. 3d. lower at 2s. 6d., and the Defd. 1½d. off at 5s. 6d.; while Dunlops came back 3d. to 17s., and African and Eastern 3d. to 4s. Turner and Newall recovered 9d. to 29s. 9d., and United Molasses hardened 1½d. to 10s. 6d. The Swedish issues again trended downward. Swedish Match "B" touched 5 15/16 at one time, and were finally 1/16 easier at 6; while Kreuger and Toll receded ⅜ to 8⅜, and the Debs. ¼ to 10½.

OIL SHARES EASY.

Quiet conditions again prevailed in the Oil Share Market, and, in sympathy with most other sections of the Stock Exchange, the tendency was dull. The volume of business in both the leaders and speculative descriptions was once more extremely small. At the opening lower prices were general, following a decline in leading American oil stocks on Wednesday, and quotations were further marked down owing to fears that Continental selling might be encountered. Losses were general at the close.

RUBBER SHARES IDLE.

Interest in the Rubber Share Market remained on extremely meagre lines, but quietly steady conditions prevailed, and at the close quotations were practically, without exception, unchanged from Wednesday's final levels. Quiet conditions also ruled in the raw material department, but the improved values returned on the previous day were mostly well maintained. Spot and December opened at 3d. per pound, weakened to 2 15/16d. per pound, and then rallied to 3d. per pound.

DUNVILLE & CO.'S MEETING.

CRUSHING IMPOST OF SPIRIT DUTY.

The annual general meeting of Dunville and Co., Limited, was held at the offices, 25 Arthur street, Belfast. Captain the Right Hon. C. C. Craig, D.L., chairman, presided, and the following directors were also present:—Messrs. J. C. Brownrigg, A. F. Craig, H. H. Chettle, W. M. Ferguson and J. Heasley.

Before dealing with the formal business of the meeting, a tribute of respect to the late chairman, Mr. R. L. Dunville, was proposed by Captain Craig, and passed in silence.

The recommendation of the directors to pay a final dividend of 7s. per share, less income tax, was adopted. This, with the interim dividend of 5s. per share paid in May last, is equivalent to a dividend of 6 per cent. for the year.

CAPTAIN CRAIG'S ADDRESS.

The Chairman said the crisis through which they had just passed, and were still passing, endangering, as it had done, the very existence of the trade of the country and the structure of the British Empire, had of necessity meant that the many grievous injustices from which this and similar trades are suffering should be relegated to the background for the time being. Now, however, that they had a National Government armed with an overwhelming majority it was to be hoped that when the country was in smoother water attention would be turned to some of the more glaring burdens from which they should be relieved. It had been pointed out ad nauseam that under the crushing imposition of 72s. 6d. per proof gallon the whiskey trade, as a whole, was being gradually ground down. Only large firms like theirs, of extraordinary financial stability, had been able to maintain their position. The last year in which the spirit duty was 50s. per gallon the revenue received 18 millions more from that source than last year with the duty at 72s. 6d. With an Exchequer on the verge of bankruptcy and robbing hen-roosts which had already been cleared out, was it too much to hope that the new Chancellor would take a more rational view of the situation? It would be foolish, however, for them to place too much reliance on any Government taking this view; for they knew that the trend of Budget legislation for many years past had been to place more and more impositions on them in the way of duties, just as soon as it was thought that more revenue could be extracted from them.

Mr. A. F. Craig and Mr. Brownrigg were re-elected directors.

LONDON MINING MARKET QUIET.

PUBLIC INTEREST LACKING: PRICES GENERALLY EASIER.

With public interest still at a low ebb and professionals disinclined to increase commitments, the Mining market disclosed a downward trend.

Kaffirs started the day badly in consequence of the determination of the Union Government to maintain the gold standard, and although later a more hopeful feeling prevailed, buyers found it difficult to supply their wants. Early losses were not entirely wiped out, and on balance only two small gains could be recorded against a long list of shrinkages.

The Rhodesian department again presented a dull and uninteresting appearance. Business was reduced to very small proportions, and except in two instances sellers predominated and prices fell away.

The price of tin eased to £131 12s. 6d. per ton. The share market was still nervous and unsettled, so that, in the absence of any improvement in public interest, prices where altered were lower. Australians were left to themselves, except that Wiluna were again rather offered, and further receded. The price of copper, as a result of the failure of the conference, was lowered to £33 7s. 6d. per ton, and the share market became distinctly dull. Although the price of silver was maintained at 18 1/16d. per ounce, Silver shares were quiet, and Burma Corporation on a little offering relapsed sharply. Closing prices:—

THE MONEY MARKET

LOANS STILL STRINGENT.

There was again considerable pressure for money in Lombard street yesterday, but the market managed to escape further application to the Bank of England. Borrowers frequently had to pay up to 5½ per cent. for advances until to-day, while 5 to 5¼ per cent. was charged for renewing old day-to-day money.

In the Discount market the three months' bill rate was maintained at 5 13/16 to 5⅞ per cent. in the absence of any reduction in the Bank rate. The new Treasuries were offered at 5 13/16 to 5⅞ per cent., while the banks were buyers of December and January bills at 5¾ and 5 13/16 per cent. respectively. It is anticipated that to-day's Treasuries will be placed at around 5⅞ per cent.

Silver was unchanged for spot at 18 1/16d. per ounce, but improved ⅛d. for forward delivery to 18 3/16d. Gold was quoted 4d. higher at 109s. 1d. per ounce fine.

In the Foreign Exchange Market yesterday the pound displayed a generally easier tendency, although in some instances closing quotations were in favour of sterling. Dollars opened steady around their overnight level, but appreciated later to 3.76¼, compared with 3.77 at the previous close. Sterling on Montreal, however, improved considerably and finished 3c. dearer on the day at 4.23.

The franc fluctuated between 95⅞ and 96¼, and was finally quoted ¼fc. dearer on balance at 96¼. Movements in the remaining Continental currencies were small.

BANK OF ENGLAND RETURN

A further large contraction in the active note circulation is mainly responsible for an increase in the Bank of England's reserve of £2,514,644, making the total £42,155,969, as compared with £65,255,250 at the same time last year. The note circulation now stands at £354,612,998, as against £357,195,262 last week, and £353,740,322 last year. The Bank's holding of coin and bullion has dropped by £65,620 to £121,770,967, which is £37,194,605 below the holding at the corresponding date last year. Public deposits have risen by £2,070,025 to £21,213,372, but bankers and private deposits are both lower, the former by £798,650 at £59,662,473, and the latter by £726,588 at £37,616,598. Government securities in the banking department show a fall on the week of £3,990,000, and at £51,005,906 are £17,574,659 higher than last year.

Discounts and advances have risen by £390,574 to £12,067,781, and "securities" by £1,644,503 to £31,000,381.

Consequent mainly upon the increase in the Bank's total reserve the proportion of reserve to liabilities now stands at 35.5 per cent., as compared with 33.6 per cent. last week, and 59.1 per cent. a year ago.

FINANCIAL PARAGRAPHS.

CONTROL OF DUNLOP INTERESTS.

According to a telegram, dated Thursday, from the New York Correspondent of the Financial News, Du Pont interests, which control the United States Rubber Co., the second largest rubber and tyre manufacturers, are reported to have acquired controlling interests in the Dunlop Tire and Rubber Co. of Canada, and also an interest in the Dunlop Tire and Rubber Corporation of the United States. It is not announced whether any affiliation with the United States Rubber Co. is contemplated, but it is suggested in some quarters that the plan is a means of anticipating the forthcoming British tariff policy. The Dunlop Rubber Co., Ltd., controls the Dunlop Tire and Rubber Corporation. It acquired from the Tyre Investment Trust in 1928 that company's interest in the Dunlop Tire and Rubber Goods Co., Ltd., of Canada.

ANGLO-ARGENTINE TRAMS.

A temporary suspension of interest payments and sinking fund obligations on the £5,709,615 5 per cent. Third Debentures of the Anglo Argentine Tramways Company is proposed, and a scheme of arrangement will be submitted at a meeting of stockholders. The half-year's interest due on 1st December calls for £142,740 and the sinking fund instalment for £22,860. Payment of the half-yearly interest due 1st December, 1931, 1st June, 1932, 1st December, 1932, and 1st June, 1933, is to be postponed until 1st December, 1936, and the company is to be released from its sinking fund obligation for 1931 and 1932. If the trustees prior to 1st December, 1935, consider the financial position of the company does not warrant payment of interest for the half-year ending on that date, a further moratorium is proposed in respect of payments due 1st December, 1933, and 1st June, 1934, together with the sinking fund obligation for 1933. Interest payments will be resumed on 1st December, 1933, or, if the trustees approve the extension, on 1st December, 1934. Interest in arrear will carry simple interest at 6 per cent. per annum, payable together with the interest on which it accrues, and be secured by a floating charge ranking pari passu with the charge securing such stock. Any arrears not paid off by 1st December, 1936, shall, with the interest thereon, be payable on that date, and no dividends shall be paid on the share capital until all the arrears of interest have been paid in full and the sinking fund payments resumed.

Dublin's Baldoyle Tenantry.

FROM A SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.

THAT the Dublin Corporation should stand in the light of an absentee landlord anywhere in this country may appear strange. That, with all the City Council's arduous endeavours to cope with the housing problem within the precincts, it should at the same time, be regarded by some as a neglectful landlord outside them may appear stranger still. Yet it is so.

In Baldoyle, near the harbour, there are some old thatched cottages. The lord of the manor of these is the Corporation of the City of Dublin. There is, too, other house property elsewhere in the village of which the Corporation is also owner of the building as well as of the ground. These tenants are unsatisfied. Some complain of the worst type "in a landlord—neglect to repair, and others are aggrieved at the shortness of notice. Of liability for public service the Dublin Corporation is innocent. For these the Baldoyle people have put up a strenuous fight with the Dublin County Council. It would appear that that issue is full of promise of success. As regards the Corporation the villagers have, as it were, only begun to take the field. A combined approach to the landlord is in preparation.

TEN CENTURIES AGO.

The city is owner of nearly the whole of the Barony of Coolock and Baldoyle. When, in 1035, Sitric, Danish King of Dublin, founded Christ Church, it became incumbent upon him to provide for its maintenance. He did so by granting to it, not only the land of the manor of Baldoyle, but also the tithes, cows and corn of Baldoyle."

There followed a bad time for the Danes, who during a hundred years afterwards fought the Welsh and the Irish until Dermot MacMurrough, King of Leinster—the friend of all our troubles—defeated and killed them in the year that St. Laurence O'Toole was made Archbishop of Dublin.

"The devil was sick: the devil a monk was he."

"The devil was well: the devil a monk was he."

MacMurrough was sick, and wisely took note. For his recovery he vowed the erection of a house for religious. Dermot was directed to this good practice. He had recently built a convent for nuns, and incidentally was responsible for the naming of Denmark street. He founded this convent outside the eastern gate of the city, and that became known as Dame's Gate. In gratitude for his recovery from his illness he founded the Priory of All Hallowes, some distance away: Trinity College now stands on its site.

ROB PETER TO PAY PAUL.

In providing for the Priory of All Hallows, or All Saints', as some say it, this King of Leinster—if right he be right—would seem to have done so on the principle of robbing Peter to pay Paul. He took the "manor of Baldoyle" for Christ Church and granted them to Bishop Edan O'Killedy for the monastery's use. As a sociological note it is interesting to mention that, like Sitric, the Dane, Dermot, the Gael, gave not only the land but the farmers and serfs thereon."

Things went well with Baldoyle from then on. In 1569 it attained the honour of being the seat of a Parliament. This honour came to Baldoyle for the very peculiar reason that it had no buildings fit to hold a Parliament to accommodation for the parliamentarians. Sir William de Windsor wanted money and doubts about the Commons granting it, he was a man of resource and founded one. He looked around for the most convenient place to hold a Parliament, and chose Baldoyle. The only assembly room in it was a small chapel, while houses were sparse and poor in the district. Sir William summoned the Parliament, but got into trouble with his friends and supporters. When the others arrived the chapel was filled and the few houses had been occupied. There were not the times for camping without city walls with any peace of mind, and the Commons, in disgust, returned to their homes.

Sir William de Windsor, with such of the Parliament that remained, passed laws legislating exorbitant "assessments and tailliages" upon the Pale. These proceedings brought the Baldoyle Parliament into bad odour, and in response to angry protests Edward III. four years later set up a Commission of Inquiry, before which all the facts were revealed.

REWARD FOR LOYALTY.

From 1275 Baldoyle disappears from history until the time of Henry VIII. In the dissolution of the monasteries the Priory of All Hallows was involved. With the seizure of the monks' property Baldoyle for a while fell into the royal hands, but was destined soon to find a final resting place in its possession by the Dublin Corporation.

The Silken Knight, Thomas FitzGerald, son of the Earl of Kildare—or Silken Thomas, as he is sometimes called—rebelled against King Henry. He battered at the walls of Dublin castle ineffectively, and failed. He had caused a lot of trouble and annoyance to the citizens of Dublin, who had adhered to the royal cause; and when the trouble was over they sought a reward for their loyalty.

The lands of the dissolved monastery of All Hallows were "granted to the Corporation of the City of Dublin on account of their support and suffering by the rebellion," and Baldoyle became the property of Dublin. Included in this grant were Coolock and part of Drumcondra.

There came a time when Dublin wanted to get rid of it. This, it is stated, proved impossible, as it had been granted in trust for ever, and the Corporation cannot sell it. Whether in our day the Corporation still likes it, and, therefore, does not care for it is a matter certain inhabitants of Baldoyle hope shortly to discuss as tenants with their landlord.

BOOKS OF THE WEEK.

Mise en Page. By A. Tolmet. London: The Studio, Ltd. 30/- net.

THE Studio Press in the production of "Mise en Page," the theory and practice of lay-out, has given to the public an opportunity to review the most modern methods followed by those whose work it is to convey messages from the producer to the possible purchaser. This volume, in spite of its necessarily high price, will prove a sound investment to the young advertising artist, who will find in it not only a vast amount of information, both in letterpress and illustration, about the most up-to-date "publicity" methods, but valuable lessons in the art of modern lay-out. The freshness and remarkable simplicity of most of the designs which suggest a happy hour with sheets of coloured paper, a pair of scissors and a paste pot, undoubtedly will serve as a tonic to many a fagged brain, and will evoke many new ideas.

There has been much controversy on the question of the influence of primitive art on that of the twentieth century. All interested in this subject are advised to take this opportunity to see examples of both side by side. The lay-out of the inscriptions on the ancient monuments so excellently photographed for this volume, when looked at in this way, will be more fully appreciated than ever before.

"The first page of a book should open with the same effect as the rising of a curtain at a theatre. Before the actors have spoken the décor should make us want to hear them." The beautiful example introduced to illustrate this caption may, perhaps, leave those unable fully to enjoy it troubled on account of their lack of vision, and in this event something has been accomplished.

"Mise en Page," which has been published in France, is printed both in English and French. The summary, which, as is to be expected, is a fine example of lay-out, is in eleven parts, and acts as a very necessary explanatory guide to this most modern publication.

AN ULSTER POET.

The Flute over the Valley: Antrim Song. By John Lyle Donaghy. Larne: The Inver Press. 1/6 net.

MR. LYLE DONAGHY'S fourth volume of verse seems to mark an interlude, rather than a stage, in his development. "The Flute over the Valley" has nothing in common with the cold, intellectual austerity of his former work. It is a book of simple poems, poems of the Antrim countryside, of flowers and limestone and the sea. Not all of them are good poems, but those that are have an almost perfect lyric loveliness. "Ringfad" is, perhaps, as splendid a ballad as has come out of modern Ireland:—

Drops from the eyes away;
The travelled wind comes down by it,
The clean wind sweeps the bay.
The dulce woman still passes there
Who hailed me for a king—
She tossed me merry words to hold,
And two sweet words to sing.
She told the story of a wreck,
And a proud woman who turned her helm
To the white bay of Glenarm.
A cold, spice-richened sea, a shore
Encumbered with the dead,
And broken bodies with gold-bound wrists
And wailing on Ringfad.

There is, too, "The Practice," one of the very few real poems on sport that exist. It is enough to quote the first stanza:—

Sandy Ray's a flat field, and when the green
Under the tall white goals the stud-marks
show there deep and plain;
And now it's mad September, and the ground is dry as if with coming frost;

Fine phrases are here—"the night burst crocus," "rain-rack on the sheds." There is an occasional bad phrase as well—"small-weedy, desolate," will serve as an example; but this and its rare companions are set off by such a stanza as that which closes "The Flax Pulling":

But one will come again to-night
Here by the moon-streamed beats,
And under a Spring moon once more
The silky flax-wave fleets.

EDUCATION.

Education for Life. By Neelie Davies, M.A., Ph.D. London: Williams and Norgate. 7/6 net.
The Life of Zamenhof. By Edmond Privat. London: Allen and Unwin. 4/6 net.

IN Scandinavian countries the name of Grandtvig is held sacred. Born in 1783, the son of a country minister, he died at the ripe old age of ninety, having achieved fame as clergyman, poet, philosopher, politician, scholar, reformer and educationist. His greatest achievement—and the one for which he will always be remembered throughout the world—was the establishment of the Danish Folk High School. This adventure in education remains one of the wonders of the world, and has contributed largely to Denmark's advanced position in social and cultural affairs to-day. The school is open to all people over the age of eighteen; there is no entrance examination and no leaving certificate; the education provided is decidedly not of the "bread and butter" type, being given via history, the mother tongue and song. Yet it is a fact that one-fourth of the whole country population of Denmark has attended one of these schools.

It is interesting to note that Mrs. Davies owes her interest in Grandtvig, which amounts almost to worship, to the educational writings of the late Patrick Pearse; she tells her tale well, and adds to the value of the book by the insertion of appendices which give particulars of the actual work being done in these schools.

The origin and development of Esperanto is another experiment which has attracted considerable attention. Zamenhof, its inventor, was born in Lithuania—a country of many languages which were the cause of much dissension—and the experiences of his childhood indicated the value of a universal language. This book will be found very useful to all who are interested in the growth of the Esperanto movement.

THE TALLAGHT MARTYROLOGY.

The Martyrology of Tallaght. Edited, with Introduction, Translations, Notes and Indices, by Richard Irvine Best and Hugh Jackson Lawlor. London: 1931 (Henry Bradshaw Society, Vol. lxviii.).

A MARTYROLOGY in itself is the least interesting of all the liturgical books, being little more than a mere list in which are given for every feast day of the year the names of those saints (originally martyrs only) whose triumph is celebrated on that day in some or other of the Churches of Christendom. Early martyrologies, however, have a special interest for research workers, as not infrequently they throw light upon obscure hagiographical and liturgical problems.

The two earliest extant Irish martyrologies were both drawn up about the ninth century at Tallaght by members of the community of culdees established there by St. Mael Ruain at the end of the eighth century. One, a Latin list of the usual liturgical type, is to-day known as the Martyrology of Tallaght; the other, a rhymed Gaelic martyrology, with a long poetic prologue and epilogue, is called from its author the Martyrology of Oengus. Of the Martyrology of Tallaght two incomplete texts only are in existence to-day. One of these is written on ten vellum leaves, preserved in the library of the Franciscan convent on Merchant's quay, Dublin. These leaves originally formed part of the twelfth century manuscript known as the Book of Leinster, of which the greater portion is preserved in the Library of Trinity College. The Book of Leinster text, owing to the loss of two diplomas, lacks the saints' names for something more than five months. The second text of the Martyrology of Tallaght supplies the names of the Irish saints for about four of the missing months. This second text consists of an excerpt of the Irish names only, of which the greater part was made by Brother Michael O'Clery in the first half of the seventeenth century from a Kildare manuscript which is now lost. In the year 1857 was printed a small and inaccurate edition of the Irish names only. It was based ultimately on the O'Clery excerpt.

Scholars were never satisfied with this partial and exceedingly inaccurate edition of so important a text. Some ten years ago the Henry Bradshaw Society, which was founded in the year 1890 for the editing of rare liturgical texts, entrusted the preparing of the definitive edition to Dr. R. I. Best, Librarian of the National Library of Ireland, and to Dean Hugh Jackson Lawlor, Beresford Professor of Ecclesiastical History in the University of Dublin. The edition of the Martyrology upon which these two scholars have been working for so many years has just been issued to members as Volume LXVIII. of the Henry Bradshaw Society's series.

In an interesting introduction the editors tell what is known of the text from its first construction by the monks of St. Mael Ruain's community for use in the performance of the liturgy, down to the present edition of it, designed for the use of hagiographers, liturgists and students of ancient Irish literature. In the course of this introduction the evidence of the two extant manuscripts is discussed minutely. It would have been natural to expect that the Book of Leinster manuscript would prove to represent the oldest and the best tradition. Dr. Best has gone further. He is a palæographer, to whom manuscripts are constantly revealing secrets which they had concealed from former workers. From certain errors in the O'Clery excerpt from the lost Kildare manuscript he has deduced, beyond the possibility of doubt, that the Kildare manuscript had itself been copied from the Book of Leinster Thus the O'Clery excerpt, where it duplicates the Book of Leinster, is no longer of interest, being but a copy of a copy, of which the original still exists. Dr. Best and Dean Lawlor have, therefore, confined themselves, wherever possible, to the Book of Leinster version in preparing the printed text.

For the months which are missing from the Book of Leinster exemplar, recourse has been had to the O'Clery excerpt from the Kildare copy. The now discredited variants in the O'Clery version of the other months are added by way of appendix, merely for the sake of completeness. The new edition of the Martyrology of Tallaght is printed and bound with that taste and dignity which distinguish all the volumes of the Henry Bradshaw Society's series. It has been annotated and indexed in such a way as to render reference to it a pleasure. Indeed, Dr. Best's and Dean Lawlor's work in this respect might well be taken as a model by all editors of learned texts.

Hagiographical and liturgical documents and, above all, martyrologies, are for the specialist only. In him they awaken some of that eager expectancy which the fisherman feels as he casts across a quiet pool at the foot of a tumbling rapid. For the general reader they possess little or no interest. Fortunately for him, however, mediæval Irish scribes loved to fill the margins of their manuscripts with jottings relating to the text that they were copying. As time went on the jottings attached to an ancient text tended to become inseparable from it, and would be copied, with additions, from one manuscript into another. Thus it has come about that the Book of Leinster copy of the Martyrology of Tallaght contains, in addition to the text, the marginal jottings of some hundreds of years.

These marginalia will be of interest to all lovers of the quaint and of the beautiful. Some of them are in the form of short anecdotes. Others are scraps of lyric poetry. Others, again, are mere notes or mnemonic rhymes. The most pleasing of them all, perhaps, is a poem giving the dates on which the home birds begin and cease their song and the migrants come and go. Though the language of it has been corrupted here and there by the scribes, and one or two quatrains apparently have been interpolated, the poem glows with that joyous freshness which characterises the Old Irish monastic nature lyric. Further on in the marginalia occurs a neat quatrain on a certain bishop who was famed for his justice. It is thus translated by Dr. Best:

Bishop Erc,
Everyone that passes a just judgment
May the blessing of Bishop Erc be upon him!

If a reader, having studied the Henry Bradshaw Society's edition of the Martyrology of Tallaght, be moved to say of it that it approaches as near to perfection as is possible for a work of human learning, we feel sure he will be held to have merited the Irish bishop's blessing.

RECENT FICTION.

The Trap. By Allen Havens. Heinemann Press. 10/6 net.
The Bush that Burned. By L. M. Foster. The Talbot Press. 5/- net.
Sot. By Leonid Leonov. Putnam. 7/6 net.

"THE TRAP" is nothing if not ambitious in scope and theme. Mr. Allen Havens is not alone in wishing to portray the effect of the war on his generation, but his aim is infinitely wide. He attempts to give an impression of the conditions which led up to the war, and of the war itself, as a whole; to include different races and differing standpoints; to develop all these standpoints and the characters which represent them; to show the war in its cumulative effect, and its eventual progress towards a human debacle. At the same time, he tries to preserve a central point of interest in the persons of Ian and Ray Fisher.

It is an impossibly ambitious effort, and that Mr. Havens has not been successful is not surprising; yet we admire his lion-hearted enterprise and courage. Inevitably, of course, his characters lose body, as his theories clamour for expansion. Inevitably, too, the framework at times becomes blurred by emotional crises.

Yet "The Trap" is a noteworthy failure. It is full of interest, thoughtful, sensitive and stimulating, and, since lack of unity is due to the size of the canvas, and not to inherent faults, people will read sympathetically and forgive.

This quiet story of Ulster, while it must be of especial interest to Irish Presbyterians, will make a still wider appeal. It will be appreciated by everyone who likes to read of the old days in an Irish countryside, where the picturesque phraseology of the Ulster peasant gives a touch of piquancy to the leisurely story of pleasant people. The anecdotes are delightful, and it is quite evident that the author writes of things that she has seen and heard, and that she has the gift of passing on these things to her readers.

Where "Sot" is intelligible to the ordinary reader who takes his reading as a pastime rather than an exercise, it is magnificent. The trouble with it, as with so many Russian novels, is that the thread is desperately hard to follow. There are the usual multiplicity of characters and the common kaleidoscopic transition from scene to scene. "Sot" describes the action of the Five Year Plan at a remote confluence of waters where hitherto there had been nothing save a village and a monastery of particularly unattractive monks. There is plenty of realism of the regular Russian vintage—fleas, half-wits and sore eyes. Apart from these variations from the popular taste, however, one finds a most nobly-conceived work, a host of subordinate and subtle themes, varied and excellent characterisation, and a great deal of splendid writing. "Sot" is not easy reading, but it is more than worth the application involved.

Ordinary People. By Rosita Forbes. Cassells. 7/6 net.
Scaramouche the Kingmaker. By Rafael Sabatini. Hutchinson. 7/6 net.
Other Peoples' Fires. By Hebe Elsnar. Hurst and Blackett. 7/6 net.
Whose Name is Legion. By Isabel C. Clarke. Hutchinson. 7/6 net.

ONE of these six novels announces in its title that it has been written about "Ordinary People," but it does not keep its promise. The Lakes were not ordinary, in the sense in which the term usually is applied to people; indeed, very few novels are written about really commonplace folk. Usually there is something that makes the characters a little more interesting than our observation of most of our chance acquaintances. Often the glamour is supplied by the skill of the writer, though the people of whom he writes may be ordinary enough. Mr. Compton Mackenzie does this in his charming history of "Our Street," in West Kensington, where, as a boy, he spent a good deal of his time. There, every house bore an odd number, and was the home of people who are so real that we leave them with regret. Mr. Mackenzie loved the street and many of its inhabitants, and he tells us so. He recaptures the very spirit of those days of Valentines, Muffin Men, and Cat's Meat vendors; and he is aided considerably by the delicate pencil drawings of Magdalen Fraser.

In Rosita Forbes's latest book, Gillian Lake herself comes to the conclusion that they are not such "ordinary people" after all. They are interesting, certainly, and the reader who follows their fortunes in an English manufacturing town, or in a mining camp in Iraq, has few dull moments. He will sympathise, too, with the young Lakes who were ordered to "think for themselves"—only to find that, underneath their apparent broadmindedness, their parents were rigidly conventional.

"Scaramouche The Kingmaker" cannot be called an ordinary person, and admirers of his earlier exploits know that they may expect something exciting when André-Louis Moreau, the "Citizen Aristocrat," comes on the scene. In Mr. Sabatini's new book the aim of Scaramouche is to "re-establish the French Monarchy on the ruins of the Republic," an aim that ensures an exciting time both for him and for those who read about him. This very able writer is on familiar ground when he chooses the French Revolution for his stage; and André-Louis Moreau is an attractive dare-devil.

Owen Rutter's story of the "White Rajah" is described by the author as a tale in which "fact predominates over fiction"; and if we still accept the headline teaching of our copy-books, we shall have no difficulty in believing Mr. Rutter's assurance; for here, if ever, is fact stranger than fiction. The story of James Brook, the White Rajah, and of his rescue of Lavinia Mannering, and their search for Oliver, her twin, who was still in the clutches of pirates, is thrilling and well told.

Fay Chalmers, the red-haired girl who sits at "Other People's Fires," and who picks up as many crumbs as she can get from other people's tables, has a "better nature" that dislikes all this intensely. Although she appears to be a parasite, there is good stuff in her, and she does her best for those she loves. Miss Clarke's novel, "Whose Name Is Legion," now appears again, after an interval of sixteen years. It is concerned with spiritualism and with manifestations, in an English country house, and in Djebl Anaba, where a guilty secret does a great deal of damage. In this list of new novels Mr. Mackenzie's delightful reminiscences of a suburban street must be placed an easy first.

Flittermouse. By J. G. Sarasin. Hutchinson. 7/6 net.

In her new book J. G. Sarasin has given us a capital crime tale of the Regency period. In it are such characters as "Prinny," Mrs. Fitzherbert, and Lady Jersey, to mention a few of the historical names brought into use as a background for the extremely well-thought-out story, in which a supposed descendant of the terrible Gilles de Retz and her brother are caught up in a series of truly alarming adventures.

We see Brighton in all the glory of its pavilion days, and the reader's only regret is that the book comes to an end so soon.

JUDICIAL AUTONOMY OF THE DOMINIONS.

National Sovereignty and Judicial Autonomy in the British Commonwealth of Nations. By Hector Hughes, K.C. London: P. S. King and Son, Ltd. Price 9/- net.

THE growing importance of the political and constitutional issues of the British Commonwealth of Nations, which have been exercising the minds of the members of various Imperial Conferences from 1926 to 1930, undoubtedly calls for comprehensive and co-ordinated treatment The author in his preface does not pretend that this book is either exhaustive or exclusively technical—in short, suitable only for lawyers.

By his production of this compendium of juristic comment, Mr. Hughes has performed a useful task; but, perhaps, at times he has been guilty of repetition. As the title of the book indicates, the author deals at considerable length with the question of appeals to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, and strenuously argues that the existence of such a procedure is in derogation of national sovereignty, which is an incident of Dominion autonomy. Whilst it is admitted that any particular Dominion legitimately may protest against the continuance of a procedure regarded by it as repugnant to its status—and a number of the Dominions, including the Irish Free State, have utilised the proper arena, namely, the Imperial Conference, to take this course—it is difficult to accept Mr. Hughes's specious arguments, with which he seeks to justify the Free State Government's passage of legislation designed to frustrate the right of appeal to the Judicial Committee, where leave already has been granted. Mr. Hughes refers to the criticisms of the Free State Government's action in these cases by using such phrases as "startling mistakes" and "uninformed criticism." While it is agreed that Professor Keith, an eminent authority, inaccurately interpreted the technical effect of a section of the Free State legislation in relation to the copyright case, there is no doubt that the Act, of which it was a section, was passed after the leave to appeal had been granted and before the hearing of the appeal by the Privy Council.

Does Mr. Hughes seriously contend that the Act was passed solely to amend the lacuna in the Law of Copyright as it was found to exist in the opinion of the Supreme Court of the Free State—an opinion with which the Judicial Committee subsequently disagreed in no uncertain words? So long as Article 66 of the Constitution subsists, the passing of legislation by any particular Dominion depriving its own nationals or those of other Dominions of the right of appeal therein preserved is a parliamentary procedure of doubtful validity, but not necessarily of doubtful morality.

Mr. Hughes would appear to give his approval to the idea adumbrated at the Imperial Conference, 1930, of an ad hoc tribunal to arbitrate on issues between Dominion Governments. One can only be astonished at the paucity of judicial ingenuity of the representatives of the Dominions responsible for this vague and uncertain conception. So far, at any rate, as the Free State is concerned, with its political and religious complexities, neither the suggestion of a Commonwealth court, a permanent international court, nor an ad hoc tribunal appears to be suitable; and, as the procedure to the Judicial Committee seems, according to Mr. Hughes and the Irish Government, to be peculiarly obnoxious, there remains the idea of the creation of an Irish Privy Council, thus restoring the judicial jurisdiction of the old Irish House of Lords.

METIER DU ROI.

The Delightful Profession. Edward VII. A Study in Kingship. By H. E. Wortham. London: Cape. 10/6 net.

THE reader enters but slowly into the delights of this book. In his first six or seven chapters, in which he portrays the young Prince's training for the craft of kingship, Mr. Wortham unhappily has modelled his style upon that of another biographer. He sacrifices humour and sense in his search for verbal brilliancies, and irritates his reader by an assumption of the Olympian aloofness of the biographer who sees his subject as slightly absurd, and refuses to be excited or thrilled. By the time he has brought the Prince to manhood, however, the cynic mellows into the romantic. Mr. Wortham forgets that he has read Mr. Strachey and becomes genuinely interested in his subject.

The book approaches King Edward from the human angle. Mr. Wortham has relied less upon research and official documents than upon private diaries and contemporary newspapers. Even so, we must take many of his statements on his own authority; for he seldom refers us to his authorities. Yet, with his eye for the picturesque and the significant, the Edwardian era comes to life in his pages from the fin-de-siècle fever of its beginnings to the comfortable materialism of its closing days.

The King stands out as the typical figure of his period. His pleasant vices and the curiously middle-class outlook of the day are not allowed to blind the reader to the real virtues of kindliness, dignity and wisdom which made of the stout and elderly monarch the first gentleman—perhaps, the first diplomat—of Europe. The Kings of England, with few exceptions, have never been afraid to move about among their subjects, and of the whole line King Edward was, perhaps, the closest to the heart of the people. His friendly nature—he could tolerate all men except his deplorably bumptious nephew of Germany—and his charm of manner captivated the French, calmed down a dozen awkward international situations, and smoothed the entry to the political arena of the new party of Labour.

King Edward's diplomatic prowess, the fruit of a long—indeed, too long—apprenticeship in the métier du roi, is portrayed side by side with the social history of his reign. Once he is finished with those derivative opening chapters, Mr. Wortham has a sure touch, and the book stands out as an eminently readable example of imaginaaive and sympathetic biography.

IRISH LAND.

The Land of Ireland. By Daniel Coghlan, D.Sc. (Econ.), B.Com., etc. Dublin: Veritas Company. 10/- net.

MR. COGHLAN'S book is a work of historical research on the systems of land tenure in Ireland from the earliest time; and it has been, no doubt, the result of energetic and patient labour. The form and style of presentation, however, leave something to be desired. No dates, for instance, are mentioned in the opening chapters, so that the uninformed reader does not know when the Saer stock and Daer stock tenures commenced or ended. The same remark applies to the Brehon Laws, which are of the utmost interest and importance in any study, not only of land development in Ireland, but of any historical treatment of Irish social, economic or cultural life. Actually Mr. Coghlan's treatment of this subject constitutes the most valuable part of his book.

The chapters on the distributions and re-distributions of Irish land under the various settlements and plantations also are of a fundamental importance to any adequate realisation of the policy of English government in Ireland. The book may be commended for its chapters on recent land legislation from 1860 to the present time, a part which ought to prove useful to legal practitioners. Despite the criticisms which have been offered—and these easily can be remedied in the larger book, which the author intimates that he has in preparation—the book deserves to be read by all those who are interested in the vital subject of land tenure and its reactions in the life of a people. The book is replete with important facts.

My Russian Venture. By Mrs. Cecil Chesterton. London: Harrap. 8/6 net.

BOOKS on Russia, which for the most part are records of personal impressions—however authoritative they may appear—continue to pour from the Press, and it is difficult for readers to discriminate between the good and the bad.

Mrs. Cecil Chesterton's journey through White Russia and the Ukraine was unhindered by official interference, so that in her account of conditions as she saw them, we feel at least that we are getting a record of first-hand impressions, and not of directed observations. Her book is written in a light and entertaining manner, and it is easy to read, but only the future will determine the accuracy or otherwise of her impressions.

She discourses on the land system, propaganda, religion, marriage and Communism in general, and she is definite to the point of dogmatism in the conclusions which she draws. Yet she admits that she expresses nothing more than personal opinions, and thus allows the reader to differ when he pleases without irritation.

EARLY BULBS.

Writing on this subject in the Weekly Irish Times, the Garden Correspondent says:—

We find early-potted bulbs of the little Duc Van Tholl Tulips, Cynthella Hyacinths, also White Romans—if one is fortunate to have the latter—rooting away quietly under their covering of bogmould or ashes outside, are now sufficiently "speared" to be taken into the greenhouse, where for a few days the tender growth can be gradually inured to the light, after which 'tis but a short cry until, even in the cold house, we come under the lure of colour. This especially with the gay, wee Duc Van Tholl Tulips, which are so much appreciated at Christmas; Snowdrops, and you will, which, so soon as seen spearing through the soil, are so amenable to lifting in little clumps, embedding in fresh green moss for flowering inside. Christmas Roses, Helleborus Niger, will have a pane of glass propped over them to give us their peerless flowers in perfection.

POULTRY, CAGE BIRDS, DAIRY.

METHOD OF TESTING.

Writing on this subject in the Weekly Irish Times, the Poultry Correspondent says:—

We do not think it wise to put up an expensive lighting system until a trial is made in a small way. Separate some of the worst layers, late-hatched pullets, and backward hens, and place them in a roosting house by themselves. Light the house with a good lamp or lantern at a certain time every night—the usual time advised is somewhere between nine and eleven o'clock—so that the light will shine on the perches and on the floor underneath. Place a trough or two of grain in the full light on the floor, so that the birds will see it—not scattered in litter, as some advise—and leave it there till they come down to eat, and go back to the perches again. At first, it may take some time to induce them to come down, but when they get used to it they will respond at once when the light comes. The remarks by a writer in the Irish Times of 10th inst. are worth quoting: "There are many facts to be considered in the successful lighting of layers, such as which birds to light, length of time, and when to start lighting; also method of feeding. If birds are not of the right age and condition to light, I have found it useless; but, on the other hand, if one lights the right bird in the right way it is of extreme value, and one may nearly double the output of eggs." We may add to this that it should not be used with birds for breeding.

In Search of The Autumn Tints.

A WEEK'S MOTORING IN THE SOUTH.

BY A CORRESPONDENT.

I RAN down to Killarney last week to see the autumn tints. I was a week—or, possibly, a fortnight—too early. The excessive moisture from which the County Kerry, in common with other parts of Ireland and Great Britain, suffered during the period of the year that is usually summer, added so much "sap" to the trees that, instead of the riot of colour I expected to see, the trees were as green and as leafy as they were when I was there in June. Further, the absence of frost, which is the greatest of all colouring elements, prevented the glorious woodlands of the lake district assuming the varied hues that make Killarney at autumn time, in truth as well as in song, "heaven's reflex." The frosts will come in due time, and after them will come the equinoctial gales and before, perhaps, this article is published, all the trees, save the evergreens, will be in their winter nakedness.

The season of the autumn tints is a brief one. Lucky, indeed, are those who will be in Kerry in the interval between the colour transformation of the trees and the fall of the leaves.

"LET THERE BE LIGHT."

A week's leisurely driving from Dublin to Killarney and back—the average daily mileage never being much over a hundred per day—was productive of many impressions. In October, when "summer time" has passed, the motorist who is touring, as distinct from travelling, must so arrange his journey that his day will end before lighting-up time, and that each day's route will terminate near a comfortable hotel, which usually means in a town of fair size. My overnight stopping places were New Ross, Cork, Glenbeigh (where there is a first-class hotel with only a village in the vicinity), Killarney, Tralee and Nenagh. All of the hotels and the towns in which they are situate were seen under artificial light, for the most part—but not everywhere—the product of the Shannon.

The outstanding impression of the hour after dinner in the hotel smoke-room or lounge, and the stroll round the town before bed-time, was the fact that the Electricity Supply Board has still a lot of propaganda work to do before the people in the provincial towns of Ireland (I apologise to Cork for calling it a town) realise the benefits of adequate—not to say abundant—illumination.

ENGLISH TRADERS SHOW THE WAY.

Not a single town at which I spent a night (Cork included) was adequately lit after dark. Few shopkeepers appreciated the fact that a well-illuminated window is an effective advertisement—and a cheap one with the Shannon current at a penny a unit for advertising purposes. The exceptions were the "chain stores" of the many English multiple houses now established in the Free State.

Hotel proprietors do not seem to understand that all their guests do not want to go to the local cinema, and that plentiful light in the public rooms of the hotel, and even in the bedrooms, is essential if one desires to read the local paper—frequently the only reading matter on the smoke-room table.

AFTER FORTY YEARS.

I met a retired Army man in the hotel at New Ross, who, after an absence of forty years, had returned to Ireland to spend the evening of his days and a well-earned pension in his native land. After his long exile, two things struck him as outstanding. One was the higher standard of living amongst the peasant classes—indicated, amongst other ways, by the silk stockings and the fashionable clothes the farmer's wife and the farmer's daughter donned when they went to town to do the week's marketing. The second was the improvements that have been effected in the roads during the four decades he spent in India.

All of those who travel by road, and particularly the men and women of the early cycling period—those who blazed the trail in the late 'eighties and the early 'nineties on solid-tyred machines—recognise and appreciate the improved road surfaces that the application of some of the funds derived from the taxation of motor cars has produced. Nevertheless, it is only when one is on the road for a week or more that one fully realises how good most of the main roads now are. From Dublin to Glengariffe there is no stretch of more than a dozen miles that is any worse than the excellently surfaced highway that carries thousands of motor cars every day from Bray to Dublin. Many lengthy stretches are even better surfaced than the Bray road. The same might be said of the road from Tralee to Dublin. Of the country between Glengariffe and Tralee, over which I travelled, it is a different story.

UP, KERRY!

The road authorities of Co. Kerry do not seem to realise that in the future the greater number of their visitors will reach "the Kingdom" by road. If the visitors find the standard of the roads in the county is considerably below that of the rest of Ireland—well, they won't come a second time, and they will keep their friends away.

I shall briefly indicate the itinerary I followed and the nature of the roads I found. The long rise from Glengarriffe to the tunnel on the Cork-Kerry boundary, and the still longer descent to Kenmare, need more attention than they are receiving, if the road is to be kept up to the standard at which the late Mr. P. C. Cowan, then chief engineering inspector of the Local Government Board, put this road before the war. From Kenmare I followed the Sneem road to Blackwater Bridge, and found it awful. Cutting across the peninsula from Blackwater Bridge through Ballaughbema Pass, Glencar and Caragh Lake to Glenbeigh, I found a fair mountain road, and the same may be said of the road down the centre of this peninsula from Glencar, over Ballaughosheen to Waterville, and also of the mountain road from Sneem to Moll's Gap (Windy Gap) and Killarney. From Waterville to Sneem was as bad as from Kenmare to Blackwater Bridge—disgraceful for part of the circular route that every Kerryman impresses on the visitor he must do no matter what he omits.

A NIGHTMARE.

As for the 100 miles from Killarney to Dingle, round Slea Head, over the Connor Pass and to Tralee, I would like to draw a veil over it. Most of it was a nightmare. At times the vile surface shook the bodywork of the car to such an extent that the doors opened automatically, and at the end of the day I found the metal framework carrying the glass of the windscreen had been broken across in two places.

The Kerry County Council must awaken to its responsibilities. Kerry motor owners are paying as much in taxation as those of us who live in other parts of the Free State. They are entitled to better roads than they have. If Kerry is to retain its tourist traffic it must put all its roads in order—not merely a few of its trunk highways.

IRELAND FOR A HOLIDAY.

Let me conclude on a more pleasing note. Ireland is still the cheapest place in the world to spend a motoring holiday. Seven days on the road cost two of us under £9, for three meals a day (sometimes four), and sleeping accommodation. Is there anywhere it could be done cheaper? We did not select our stopping place or our hotels. We took them haphazard, as we found them; avoiding the de luxe houses which the Automobile Association indicates by a three-star mark, and always taking a two-star hotel in preference to a one-star when a choice was offered. The classification of hotels, following their periodical inspection, is not the least valuable of the work the A.A. does for its members. The magnificent series of direction signs and warning signs which it has spread over every quarter of Ireland has made the path of the wayfarer plain, "even though he be a fool."
